Ohio's $6,000,000 Housing Plan Awaits Senate OK

HOUSE GIVES APPROVAL TO PENSION HIKE

Lower Chamber Approves Key Measures Requested By Governor.

By REED SMITH

COLUMBUS—(AP)—The Ohio senate decides today whether the state will have a $6,000,000 GI housing program and if the aged and the blind shall receive benefit increases.

The house of representatives passed and sent to the senate those kingpins in the administration's special session program and quit work at 1 a. m. (EST), scheduling only skeleton sessions next week to sign bills and adjourn sine die.

Senate leaders said the upper chamber must pass the house-approved measures without change to complete their enactment, except for Gov. Frank J. Lausche's signature.

Rep. Robert R. Shaw (R Franklin), house majority leader, said last night he had been assured by party leaders the senate would make no alterations in the bills.

Use Population Basis.

The veterans' housing bill as approved by the representatives provides for distribution of the $6,000,000 to county commissioners on the basis of county population in relation to that of the state for equipping and operating surplus war housing units supplied by the federal government.

The house asked the senate to concur in its amendments to bills previously passed by the upper chamber to increase old age pensions and benefits to the blind from $40 monthly to $50 with the aid of federal funds and to provide $200 additional anually for medical and hospital care.

An amendment to the old age pension bill by Rep. Fred L. Hoffman, jr (R-Hamilton) would make occupants of county homes eligible for $50-a-month pensions at age 65.

Opponents claimed the federal government would not share the cost of such pensions and that they would have to be borne entirely by the state

Amends Blind Bill.

The house also amended the senate bill to aid the blind by eliminating county contributions, which now approximate one-third, and leaving the state and federal government to share the costs equally. The state now contributes one-sixth.

The house also approved a hospital survey which would make

A QUEEN REIGNS: Modestly setting aside all her regal splendor, pretty, red-haired Marilyn Baker of Shelby (right) seated herself charmingly on a bench today as she enjoyed the final day of the Richland county fair. She was chosen 4-H queen last night. It was a big day at the fair also for other 4-H youngsters. Shirley Bowers, 13, of Bellville, R. D. 1, had a lot of fun (left) trying to convince Maynard Marsh, who resides on the Fairgrounds, that he should let her hitchhike a ride on Marsh's 7-year-old horse, "Texas Man." The horse seemed willing, even if Marsh was open to conviction. And little Billy Nusbaum of 618 Bowman street seemed more awed than thrilled by what he found. Even the balloon hanging by a string over his shoulder (inset at bottom) was content to rest quietly.

Shelby Girl Crowned As Queen

Healthiest Boy and Girl Being Chosen Today at County Fair.

Some 300 members of the junior and senior Richland county 4-H clubs, filling every nook and corner of Johns park community house, applauded vigorously last night, as pretty, red-haired Marilyn Baker, of Shelby, was crowned Richland County 4-H queen, and Dixie Scoles, South Boulevards; Dorothy Gribben, Shelby; Marjorie Hoover, Mifflin township, and Wilma Oswalt, Weller township, were presented as her attendants.

Another queen and a king were being crowned today. Examinations started at 10 a. m. to select Richland county's healthiest boy and girl.

Dr. C. O. Butner, Shiloh, examined the contestants. He officiated for Dr. W. B Wild, city-county health commissioner who is in General hospital for minor surgical treatment.

Crowning of the 4-H queen and presentation of her attendants highlighted the festivities at the exhibitors' party climaxing the first of a two-day 4-H club county junior fair

Square dances, games and singing featured the party.

YUGOSLAV RELATIONS CONFUSED

Seven Americans Released But Fear Expressed Five Others Dead.

FROM N-J NEWS WIRES

Confusion marked today's developments in the strained relations between the United States and Yugoslavia.

All three news services quoted the Belgrade radio as saying the Yugoslav news agency, Panyoug, had reported that Marshal Tito had decided to "reject" the U. S. ultimatum on the downing of American fliers.

Yet, the Associated Press said the state department in Washington officially confirmed the release of nine occupants on one American army plane forced to make a crash landing Aug. 9. Hopes for the safety of five other American fliers shot down by Yugoslav fighters last Monday faded as the Yugoslav Fourth army expressed doubt any of them parachuted to safety, the AP said.

Meanwhile, the United Press took another view, reporting that the U. S.-Yugoslav dispute broke out afresh when Tito's government, in evident reprisal for a Washington threat to hale Yugoslavia before the United Nations, proposed instead to make the U. S. defendant before the UN.

Russia relayed a Belgrade report that Yugoslavia was accusing the United States of illegally retaining Yugoslavia's fleet of Danube river boats. The U. S. army seized several score of river vessels three months ago in a raid aimed at breaking up smuggling.

The Moscow radio said Yugoslavia sent a letter to secretary-general of the NU, Trygve Lie, asking to put on the Security Council agenda for Aug. 31 the boat seizure charge against the United States.

Five Fliers Missing.

"The length of time the matter had been pending," the UP stated, "made it evident that it was no coincidence that Yugoslavia reopened it while a 48-hour ultimatum to Tito over the downing of American planes was pending."

On the fate of the five still missing American fliers, the UP said, apparently depended the satisfaction of the U. S. ultimatum.

The seven Americans and two Hungarians aboard the first transport forced down Aug. 9 were in Gorizia, Italy. They were released yesterday Official Yugoslav sources said the seven fliers were given their liberty before American Ambassador Richard Patterson had handed to Tito a copy of the U. S. ultimatum.

From Paris, the (AP) reported an official Yugoslav spokesman as saying the Turkish officer-passenger on the shot-down U. S. transport was being detained because his "flight over Yugoslavia was not accidental." Secretary

Can You Give Vet A Home?

Four hundred veterans and their families are seeking homes today in Mansfield. The Veterans' Information center says the list grows daily.

Mansfielders only this month responded generously to an appeal by manufacturers for accommodations for new workers Well over 600 rooms were found in a two-day campaign.

The News-Journal feels residents will respond equally enthusiastically to the appeal on behalf of veterans. Therefore, it will present each day a typical veteran's hardship case.

Today's story is that of Mrs. Burl DeVore, jr, 614 South Diamond street.

Mrs. DeVore's husband is a paratrooper now on active duty in Japan. He's not expected home for two or three years.

In addition to her two children, Mrs. DeVore's five-year-old sister and her mother live with her.

Mrs DeVore has received notice that she must vacate her present quarters Oct. 7.

"It's very difficult to know you must move and to have no where to go," she says.

The Veterans' Information center (1730-61) would be happy to learn of a place for Mrs. DeVore and her family. Need anyone guess how Mrs. DeVore would feel?

SHIP WALKOUT NEARING END

Union Uses 44-48 Work Week Agreement as Pattern For Strike Settlement.

DETROIT—(AP)—A work week of 48 hours at sea and 44 hours in port was put forth today by the CIO National Maritime Union as a pattern for settlement of its nine-day-old Great Lakes shipping strike.

A few hours after tentatively accepting the 44-48 proposal from the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the NMU announced an agreement with Bethlehem Transportation Company, in New York

An estimated 2,500 NMU sailors on the lakes now work 56 hours weekly.

Seamen in four major lake ports accepted the Standard Oil proposal and NMU members in the remaining 14 ports were asked by the strike committee to ratify it.

Under NMU rules, a majority of the membership on the lakes must ratify any agreement covering any segment of the union.

Besides a shorter work week, the Standard Oil compromise calls for an increase of five, 10 and 15 cents per hour in overtime pay according to a seaman's rating

Any agreement ratified with Standard Oil, which operates five tankers, would be the first reached with any lakes operator since the walkout began Aug. 15.

An NMU spokesman said it would serve as "a pattern" for any settlement with the other shippers.

The NMU stood by its claim of 132 vessels idle as a result of the strike. The Lake Carriers Association at Cleveland contends that seamen are returning to struck vessels at a faster rate than they walked off.

OSR Fugitive Caught After Quarter Century

Twenty-eight years of freedom from Ohio Reformatory were at an end today for Lester Blosser.

The man, now 48, fled from the Sandusky honor camp, Dec. 7, 1918, Reformatory officials said, when informed of an Associated Press dispatch from Centralia, Ill. He had been sentenced to the reformatory Feb 21 1918, from Seneca county for one to 15 years for burglary.

In the more than quarter century since, Blosser used the name John Moore. Police Capt. Henry Carlyle of Centralia said the fugitive had to be prompted as he spelled out the name Blosser, which he apparently had "nearly forgotten."

Carlyle said the man waived extradition, explaining he wanted to resume serving his sentence for what he said was a theft of five pocket knives.

"It has been on my mind," Blosser was quoted. "I want to clear it up."

Blosser told Centralia officials he was only 19 when sentenced. He said he had only a short time to serve when he escaped

His first 25 years of freedom, Blosser said were spent working in Pennsylvania coal mines and with a carnival in Maryland Three years ago, he went to Centralia where he worked in a factory and in orchards

Carlyle said Blosser's (or Moore's) record showed no criminal acts in those 28 years.

The "chance" discovery that Blosser was a fugitive came, Carlyle said, while police were questioning him in connection with the arrest of another man, suspected but never charged in a robbery.

Reformatory officials said an officer would leave Saturday for Centralia to return Blosser.

Officials said that new ceilings on meat representing increases over June 30 levels of six to seven cents a pound for lamb, one to two cents a pound for beef, and at least one cent a pound for pork would be announced next week.

The agency plans to make public today new ceilings on fats and vegetable oils at the tank car level. These ceilings, to be effective immediately, will be the first restored by OPA on commodities ordered back under price control by the price decontrol board.

An OPA spokesman said that

HUNT ROBBERS

Officials Link Gunmen With Bank Holdup Series.

ELYRIA—(AP)—A "Mutt and Jeff" pair of gunmen, believed responsible for robbing several northern Ohio banks this summer, were hunted today in the $4,500 holdup of the nearby Wakeman Bank Co.

Harry T. O'Connor, special agent in charge of the FBI office in Cleveland, said there that the Wakeman daylight robbery yesterday was believed committed by the same tall and short pair sought for Coshocton and Summit county bank robberies

The Wakeman robbers escaped shortly after noon in a 1946 blue Chevrolet after scooping up the money in cashiers tills

Quonset Huts All You Get, Wives Told

It's "Palace Heights" or nothing for Mansfield's first army family to reach Tokyo

Mrs. F. L. Hart, daughter of Mrs. Otho Hamman, 90 South Foster street, and other members of a delegation of army wives were informed today they probably would have to remain in their quonset hut village until after the first of the year, the Associated Press reported

Col. R. A. Diller, secretary to the general staff, said the village never was intended to house dependents of army personnel. Mrs. Hart's husband expects to remain in Japan three to six years. She and her daughters, Wanda, Gail and Sandra, recently arrived in Tokyo.

The village was utilized Col Diller went on, to enable some junior officers to bring their families to Tokyo before permanent housing is ready. Dependents of officers who chose to await completion of adequate housing are expected soon

"These officers who waited will have to be considered," Col Diller said.

BLANKS ARRIVE

Terminal Leave Forms For Vets Available Now.

Good news for some of Richland county's 6,449 discharged veterans arrived at the Mansfield postoffice today in the form of thousands of long-awaited terminal leave pay application blanks.

Acting Postmaster Curtis L. Ford said an "apparently ample supply" of the forms had arrived and that all veterans' agencies and organizations had been notified they were available.

Ford stressed the fact that the blanks would not be delivered by mail carriers, but may be obtained by calling at post office windows. He added that postal officials are not required to assist veterans in completing the forms.

FEARS SURPLUS

Anderson Desires Method to Insure Production Goals.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Wary lest some crops may yield surpluses next year, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson is casting about for a method of inducing farmers to stick to government production goals.

Under existing farm laws, the agriculture department is required to "support" prices of most agricultural commodities.

Looking to the prospect that world food demands on this country may dwindle considerably after this year, Anderson is known to feel that these support levels may, in the case of some commodities, be too favorable. That is, they might provide an incentive which would lead farmers to produce more than is needed.

Check Rail Strike At Eleventh Hour

NEW YORK—(INS)—The Long Island railroad's 300,000 anxious commuters found train service operating normally today followed an eleventh hour postponement of a strike of brakemen and ticket collectors.

He said the notes would be ignored unless Washington and London make "specific allegations." The spokesman charged that the British wished to "take sides in Polish political life by giving open diplomatic support to some parties."

Survey Shows Living Costs Up 43% Since Pre-War Days

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The over-all cost of living, paced by higher food prices, increased nine per cent in the year ending July 15, a government survey showed today.

The labor department's bureau of labor statistics said that 5.8 per cent of the general rise occurred between June 15 and July 15 The jump brought to 43 per cent the total increase in living costs since August, 1939, the month before the war began.

BLS previously had reported a 5.5 per cent increase for the June 15-July 15 period in a preliminary survey. Complete figures now available pushed the first figure up .3 per cent.

BLS said food led the upward trend of prices, with most of the rise occurring during the lapse of price controls. Food prices rose 13.8 per cent between mid-June and mid-July—the largest monthly change ever recorded. The largest previous monthly increase was nine per cent from March to April, 1917.

Meats advanced 29.6 per cent and dairy products 21.2 per cent in the June-July period Other important foods went up 3.7 per cent

Prices on foods on which subsidies had been paid prior to July 1 rose 18.8 per cent and all other foods increased 4.6 per cent during the month.

COUNTY'S CORN YIELD MAY DROP BELOW AVERAGE

Early Summer Drought Hit Crop Hardest, Extension Agent Reports.

While the U. S. department of agriculture today predicted that prospective corn production had declined 55,000,000 bushels during the first 15 days in August, County Agent George B. Ganyard said Richland county probably would harvest less than an average corn yield this fall.

Richland county's corn prospects haven't declined since Aug. 1, for it was earlier in the summer that drought hit the county corn hardest, Ganyard said.

The county's cornfields are spotty, some showing prospects of a heavy yield while others indicate a considerably less than average crop.

Ripening Retarded.

The cool weather since the first of the month has been retarding the maturity of corn, but there has been sufficient rain in that period so that no additional prospective decline has occurred, Ganyard said.

Meanwhile the agriculture department predicted that in spite of the predicted decline of 55,000,000 bushels, the crop would still set an all-time record.

It estimated the nation's corn crop at 3,442,202,000 bushels on the basis of Aug. 15 crop conditions in the 12 principal corn producing states and Aug. 1 conditions in all other states.

This compared with the department's Aug. 10 estimate, based on Aug. 1 crop conditions in all states, that the corn crop would total 3,496,820,000 bushels.

The previous all-time record production of 3,203,000,000 bushels was set in 1944.

The department said the decline in prospects during the first 15 days of August was due principally to continued dry weather in the lake area and plains states. The lack of moisture was most severe in southern Michigan and southern Kansas.

"Cool nights and less of the hot humid corn weather than is usual in August explains the lack of off-setting improvements in other parts of the corn belt although some improvement was shown in southern Illinois and Kentucky," the department said.

The two, Maj. John S. Bleeker, jr., 32, former Houston, Tex., printing firm employe, and Capt. Ralph L. Robinson, Inyo, Calif., a former buyer for Montgomery Ward and company, were arraigned last night and released on $1,000 bond each.

10-County Preparedness Disaster Plan Outlined

A plan for cooperation of Red Cross reserve nurses in ten counties in event of disaster was in preparation today.

The plan was outlined to 28 representatives from the ten counties at a conference in Mansfield Wednesday. The regional conference was sponsored by the American Red Cross and the state department of health.

Important on the agenda was a discussion of plans for utilizing local nursing resources whenever disaster strikes in any of the counties represented.

Conference members clarified the responsibilities of government agencies and the Red Cross and considered means of strengthening preparedness measures in the event of an emergency.

Robert Black, Richland County Red Cross disaster chairman, delivered a brief resume of the disaster preparedness program set up for Richland county.

Representing the eastern area of the Red Cross with headquarters at Alexandria, Va., Mrs. Gisella Brady discussed medical and nursing preparedness as a special disaster reserve nurse.

Catherine Denning, educational director of the State Department of Health, told of the division of responsibility between government agencies and the Red Cross in disaster preparedness and relief work.

Mrs. Lore Stauffer, a nurse and vice chairman of the subcommittee of medical and nursing aid in Richland county, and Mrs. Bess Augsberger, Richland county Red Cross secretary, presided during the sessions.

Richland county representatives included Mrs. Lore Stauffer, Miss Mary Lucille Bushey, Miss Gayle Rife and Mrs. Bess Augsberger.

BAD NAUHEIM — (UP) — Maj. Herbert W. Bluhm was acquitted by an eight-man military court today of charges of complicity in the mistreatment of U. S. soldiers at the Lichfield, England, detention center.

CALLS SOLDIERS FORGOTTEN MEN

War Secretary Finds Public Indifferent to Needs of Army Personnel.

LOWELL, Mass.—(INS)—Secretary of War Patterson charged today that peacetime soldiers rapidly are becoming forgotten men.

Patterson said that "with the cessation of hostilities, there is a tendency to roll up the bunting, take down the 'service men welcome' signs and go back to business as usual."

The war secretary spoke before the Massachusetts American Legion at Lowell, Mass. He declared:

"The attitude of 'nothing is too good for our soldiers' is giving way to indifference, not because of any antagonism but just because other activities of a postwar existence have taken time and attention."

Patterson observed that local groups no longer provide for the soldier changing trains at the local station or trying to find friends and recreation in a strange town.

Patterson made these statements in declaring that there must be 1,070,000 men under arms as late as July 1, 1947. He advocated extension of selective service and adoption of a program of universal military service.

Patterson urged the American Legion to support those two programs and to reawaken civic responsibility to men in uniform.

Although there was a tremendous increase in output of farms and factories during the war years, the civilian labor force increased only slightly between 1940 and 1942, and declined somewhat as the war progressed, Census surveys show.

Musial Stars Again as Cards Tie Dodgers for NL Lead

Hal Clawson

Looking over the scores that were posted on the scoreboard at Westbrook yesterday following the opening round of play in the Ohio Senior Golf association tournament made this writer wonder whether to keep trying or not.

Some of the veteran linksmen toured the tough country club layout with some mighty fine scores.

Of course some of the stars soared and one of them was Frank Pelton, Cleveland, who copped the title last year.

Tris Speaker would definitely be the one to beat today had he not been called back to Cleveland yesterday because of a death in his family.

Darkhorse In Caddy Event

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Al Vaskovic, 17-year-old high school junior of Binghamton, N. Y., rated as a dark horse today to win the national caddie tournament as the play moved into the quarter-finals.

Vaskovic, uncorking deadly accurate iron shots, tripped the tourney's co-medalist, Tony Ondrus of Akron, O., 1 up in a tight match here yesterday over the 6,800-yard Ohio State university course.

Vaskovic carded a five over par 77 medal while Ondrus slipped to an 81. The Binghamton youth teed off today against Norm Goeckel, Detroit, who defeated Maynard Human, Harriman, Tenn., 6 and 4.

Chick Hendrickson, Ohio State high school champ from Sandusky, was matched against Tom Little, Hamilton, O., in what was figured as a dogfight.

Hendrickson eliminated Detroit's John Tomasino yesterday, 5 and 3, while Little ousted Joe Minjares of Wichita, Kas., 3 and 2.

In the other two matches today Ralph Holguin, San Antonio, Tex., faced George Allmon, Kansas City, and Tom Nieporte, Cincinnati, met Tom Hanson, Kansas City.

Young Track Stars Run at Cleveland

It's Cleveland and the National Junior Olympics for around 20 young Mansfield track stars tomorrow.

Harry Mehock will lead his powerful squad into the huge Municipal lakefront stadium Saturday morning where close to 700 youthful athletes will seek national honors.

Tracksters from 12 to 17 years of age and representing 18 cities will compete in the first annual running of the Junior Olympics.

Besides Mansfield, other cities entering teams include Morgantown, W. Va.; Cincinnati, Erie, Pa.; Lorain, Canton, Louisville, Ky.; Escanaba, Mich.; Lakewood, Columbus, Huntington, W. Va., Toronto, Canada, and Cleveland.

Promoted here by the News-Journal the track team will leave early in the morning and will arrive in Cleveland by 9:30.

Designed as a junior edition of the Olympic games, fostering good sportsmanship and fair play, the program ceremony of that historic event will be followed as closely as possible.

Contestants, bands, floats, civic officials and visiting dignitaries will parade down Cleveland's Euclid avenue tonight preceding the Saturday games.

Preliminary and qualifying competition will be run off during the day. Finals will be held under the lights Saturday night.

Ceremonies will begin at 7:30 p. m. with a greeting by Ohio's Governor Frank J. Lausche and Cleveland's Mayor Thomas A. Burke.

"Red" Grange, the "Galloping Ghost" of the gridiron will then lead the assembled contestants in the Olympic pledge, after which team captains will make an award to the typical Junior Olympic mother.

Following this, Father Edward J. Flanagan of Boystown will pronounce the invocation.

Thereafter the flame of youth will be lighted by Cleveland Sesquicentennial Co-Chairman C. A. Otis from a torch borne to the stadium from Cleveland's Playhouse Square by a relay of one thousand runners.

Then the games will be officially under way.

Grange, and Indian Owner Bill Veeck, who will serve as referee, will participate in awarding medals to winners from a raised platform erected in the center of the stadium.

Each winner will also receive the traditional laurel wreath and a young buckeye tree in lieu of the oak in deference to the scene of the games.

A trophy will be awarded the winning team by Radio Station WJW. Both ABC and CBS have made arrangements to broadcast the award ceremonies and net results.

Colonels Hold 3½ Game Lead

(By United Press)

Louisville continued to pace the field in the American association today by three-and-a-half games.

The Colonels whipped Minneapolis, 8 to 5, last night while second-place Indianapolis duplicated the score against St. Paul, 8 to 5. Milwaukee trimmed Columbus, 6 to 3, and Toledo defeated Kansas City, 7 to 4.

Louisville outslugged the Millers, getting 13 hits to 12 for Minneapolis.

The Indians came from behind to score six runs in the fifth inning and overcame a St. Paul lead.

Wes Livengood went the route for Milwaukee, scattering nine hits in holding the cellarites to three runs.

Toledo made half as many hits as Kansas City but got them when they counted. Six runs in the first inning was enough to win and Paul Lehner supplied additional insurance with a homer in the seventh.

23 Gridders Out At Mt. Gilead

MT. GILEAD — Twenty three football candidates reported to Coach Robert Blose at Mt. Gilead this week for practice. The number is expected to jump to 35 at the start of school.

Included in the group were nine lettermen back from last years team. They include John Tennant, end; Harold Phillips, guard; Phil Dye, tackle; Jesse West, halfback; Nelson Campbell, jr., quarterback; Lawrence Burnell, fullback; Kenneth Kinney, tackle; and Gay Klingel, end.

All of the nine were regular starters on last years team. Mt. Gilead is scheduled to open its season on Friday night, Sept. 13 at Mt. Gilead against Crestline.

Sweep Two From Phils As Brooklyn Tumbles

By JOE REICHLER, AP Sports Writer.

If the St. Louis Cardinals fail to win the National league flag this season, it won't be the fault of Stanley Frank Musial, the circuit's number one batter.

Top man in almost every offensive department of play, Musial, in the past two weeks, has staged a terrific batting rampage which reached stellar heights yesterday when he practically single handedly batted the Cards into a first place tie with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Musial rapped out six hits as the Cardinals swept a doubleheader from the Philadelphia Phillies, 7-6 and 4-3, to draw even with the Dodgers who were shut out, 2-0, by the Reds in Cincinnati.

The hard-hitting first baseman won the opener, played in the afternoon, with a home run in the 12th inning and blasted the Phillies' hopes of a split with a trio of base hits which accounted for the winning runs in the second game, played at night.

Johnny (Double No-Hit) Vander Meer pitched the shutout against the Dodgers, handing the Brooks their second loss in three games of their fourth and final western trip. Rooki Third Baseman Grady Hatton drove in what proved to be the winning run in the first inning with a single, and Lonnie Frey, ex-Dodger, accounted for the Reds' second run with a home run in the second.

The Chicago White Sox won their first game from the American league leading Boston Red Sox in nine starts at Fenway park this season by coming from behind to eke out a 4-3 11-inning decision.

Winning their second doubleheader in two days, the runner-up New York Yankees trimmed the St. Louis Browns, 4-3 and 8-2, to reduce the Red Sox lead to 12½ games.

The Boston Braves won their sixth straight victory over the Chicago Cubs, 3-2, to move within 2½ games of the third place Bruins.

Rookie Southpaw Monte Kennedy won a tight pitching duel from veteran Rip Sewell as the New York Giants nosed out the Pittsburgh Pirates, 1-0, in ten innings.

The Philadelphia Athletics hammered Bob Feller for three consecutive hits in the seventh inning to outscore the Cleveland Indians, 8-6, for their third straight victory. Feller, summoned from the bullpen to protect a one-run Cleveland lead, gave up the winning runs before retiring the side. Joe Berry was charged with the loss.

A scheduled night game at Washington between the Detroit Tigers and the Senators was halted by rain at the end of two scoreless innings.

Everybody Gets Invitation

ASHLAND, O.—(AP)—There's nothing snobbish about football at Ashland college here.

Coach George H. Donces reported today that every one of the 350 male students enrolled for the fall term have been mailed invitations to try out for the team.

Practice opens Sept. 2.

Demchuck Retains Junior Crown

With 450 mat fans looking on, Junior Heavyweight Champion Johnny Demchuk retained his title here last night after taking a "beating" from Whitey Walberg.

The beating Walberg gave Demchuk was physical only with the champ getting the best of Whitey in the end.

Walberg took the first fall in 9:15 with the flying tackle body hold and then lost the next two falls in 13:50 and 12:25 with the reverse rocking chair and the Japanese arm breaker.

Jules LaRance won the opening bout, defeating Bob Cummings in two out of three falls.

Sellout Crowd For Tonight

CHICAGO—(AP)—An old reliable Chicago attraction—the 13th annual all star football game—with the Los Angeles Rams and the class of the collegians contending —will be played to a sellout crowd of 95,000 in soldier field tonight.

The kickoff is scheduled for 8:30 p. m., Central Daylight time, and if you haven't a seat for the grid classic, a description will be carried over 325 stations of the mutual broadcasting system and will be re-broadcast by short wave to America's service men throughout the world.

The Rams, titleholders of the National Football league, are favored. However, Bo McMillin, head coach of the collegians, again will be enjoying his familiar role of underdog.

Tris Speaker Fires 74 In Ohio Seniors Tourney At CC

Unable to Play Today; Joe Wells Is Favored

By HAL CLAWSON

Tris Speaker—a name familiar to all baseball fans of years ago—was the topic of conversation here yesterday afternoon.

The famous slugger of the American league and the loop's top hitter in 1916 displayed his ability with some other clubs out at Westbrook Country club.

Firing a two-over par 74, Speaker took the lead in the Ohio Seniors Golf Association annual tournament which ends today.

But the old major leaguer won't be around today to play the second and final 18 holes of the tourney. Immediately after completing yesterday's play, Speaker was informed of a death in his family and he returned to Cleveland.

Going out in even par 36 the former Cleveland outfielder posted a two-over par 38 on the back nine.

With Speaker not participating today it looks like anyone of a dozen players might cop the title. G. M. Watters, Cleveland, fired a 78 to be runner up to Speaker.

George Selbach, Columbus, is third with a 79.

Frank Pelton, the 1945 champ and president of the association, had a tough day and wound up with an 85.

A "darkhorse" appeared to be Joe Wells of East Liverpool—one of Ohio's best golfers. He carded an 80 yesterday and some of the boys around the clubhouse figure he'll be the one to beat today.

Speaker's 74 gave him low gross honors in the Class E group—men from 55 to 59 years of age.

Starting at the top, a veteran golfer, L. M. Liggett, Galion, was the lone entrant in the Class A field—made up of men 75 and older. Liggett turned in a 105.

Other division were Class B, 70 to 74; Class C, 65 to 69; and Class D, 60 to 64.

The tournament champion is determined on medal play but there are plenty of prizes for the others. There is a low gross and low net in each division and also a runner up in both gross and net.

A dinner last night at the country club was one of the highlights of the two day golf meet.

Mary Ettinger, Bill Johnson Mixed Champs

Mary Ettinger and Bill Johnson came through with a two-set victory over Ruth Isham and Norman Wilcox to win the mixed doubles title of the city tennis tournament.

The twosome turned in 6-4, 7-5 win last night at the Kingwood courts.

In a men's singles match last night at Woodlawn, Andy Zoll defeated Ruhland Isaly, 6-3, 6-4.

Tonight Zoll will meet John Patrick in the lower bracket finals with the winner taking on Wattie Slabaugh for the singles crown.

Slabaugh received a default win over Gene Rudolph who is playing with the Barnes softball team at Springfield this weekend.

Finals in the city tournament are set for tomorrow afternoon at Woodlawn with the men's singles being played a 1 p. m. and the men's doubles at 2:30.

Slabaugh and Lowell Bourns meet Charlie Nail and Ruhland Isaly in the doubles.

Sunday afternoon the Woodland tennis club will hold its final matches with Slabaugh meeting Isaly in the singles while the doubles will be a repeat of the city tourney finals.

Salesbook Nine In Second Place

SHELBY — By defeating the American Legion team, 14 to 7, Thursday night on the waterworks diamond, the Shelby Salesbook company team went into a tie for second place with the Laubie Shell Service Station in the second half of the Shelby softball league race.

The Legion took a 3 to 1 lead for the first three innings, but a rally put on by the Salesbook in the fourth inning gave the winners the lead, 9 to 3. The Legion came back to score four more runs in the sixth inning to make the score 11 to 7, but the Salesbook put the game on ice with three runs in the same inning.

Glenn Fought, Salesbook catcher, knocked out the only home run of the game in the fifth inning.

GRAYS TO PLAY TWO GAMES AT LIBERTY

Mansfield Grays will play two games at Liberty park Sunday afternoon instead of one as was originally scheduled

In a preliminary game to their contest with the Creston Pirates at 2:30, the Grays will engage the local Skeeter's Sohio nine in a tilt starting at 1 p. m.

GETS HOLSTEIN AWARD

NEW LONDON — Gilbert F. Dobbins, of Wakeman, has been awarded a certificate of merit and a junior membership in the Holstein-Freisan Association of America at Brattleboro, Vt.

Ladies Only

Horse racing may be a man's world but not in this case, for She's a Lady is just that and so is Barbara Chamness, daughter of the thoroughbred's trainer. The two are now at Randall Park near Cleveland for the Thistledown meeting.

MADISON RAMS GET PRACTICE UNDER WAY. Coach Jeff DeHaven is mighty pleased with the turnout of his Madison high grid squad. He sent out invitations to 60 boys and 57 of them reported Tuesday. That's more than half the number of boys enrolled in the entire school. Pictured above are several of the linemen going through a workout. The Rams are drilling only in the evenings.

Nelson Paces Veteran Golfers Into PGA Quarter-Final Play

PORTLAND, Ore. —(U.P.)— The "youth must be served" formula flew out the window here today as veteran campaigners of the fairways moved into the quarter finals of the National PGA tournament —every one a tried and true artist in the art of shattering par.

Four Ryder cup members, including defending champion Byron Nelson; Portland's favorite Ben Hogan from Hershey, Pa.; Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Sanford, Me., and colorful Jimmy Demaret, Houston, Tex., are in the field of eight.

They will do battle with Ed (Porky) Oliver, Chicago; Charles (Chuck) Congdon, Tacoma, Wash., Jim Turnesa, Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Frank Moore, Overland, Mo., respectively.

In the field there isn't a man less than 30 years of age and Moore is 39 years old and McSpaden 38.

Defending champion Nelson, gunning for his third PGA crown, eased past a tough foe in Herman Barron, White Plains, N. Y., 3 and 2.

Oliver was just about as hot in disposing of Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va., 5 and 4.

McSpaden eliminated E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, first day medal leader, 4 and 3.

Congdon turned in a minor surprise by turning back George Schneiter, Ogden, Utah, 2 and 1. Schneiter had eliminated Slammin' Sammy Snead, the British Open champion, yesterday, and was supposed to be in fine form.

SET COURSE RECORD

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — (AP) — Frank Stranahan, who established a new competitive course record in firing a 67 qualifying round, was, as advertised, definitely the man to beat as match play got underway today in the Great Lakes amateur golf tourney.

LUCAS AT LOUDONVILLE

LUCAS—This Sunday afternoon the Lucas Merchants will travel to Loudonville for a baseball game with the Flxible Clippers starting at 2:30. It will be the first meeting of the season between the two teams.

WESTBURY, N. Y. — (U.P.) — Mrs. Forest Burright, 63-year-old mother of seven children and grandmother of two, made her first start in eastern harness racing a winning one last night when she drove her five-year-old mare, Puzzette, to victory in a $1,500, six and a half furlong sprint at Roosevelt raceway.

Roses Sweep Twin Bill

(By United Press)

Richmond's Roses moved back into the thick of the fight for third place in the Ohio State league last night by sweeping both ends of a twin bill from Newark on the Moundsmens' field.

The Roses grabbed the opener, 2 to 1; and the nightcap, 7 to 2, and now trail Newark by a game and a half.

The Zanesville Dodgers sliced half a game off the lead of the Springfield Giants, cutting it to three games. Zanesville hammered out an 11-to-4 win over the Middletown Reds at Zanesville.

The leading Giants absorbed a 7-to-1 defeat in the opener of a bargain attraction at Marion, but came back to edge the Cardinals, 2 to 1, in the aftermath.

Hank Williams notched his 19th victory for the Lima Terriers as he defeated the last place Dayton Indians, 6 to 5, at Lima.

HANK BENCHED

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — First Baseman Hank Greenburg, baseball's highest salaried player, was assigned to a seat on the Detroit Tigers' bench today in the hope that a rest will take the big guy out of his batting slump.

Strange Revolution Going on In South.

WASHINGTON—For some time it has been fashionable to point out that a political revolution is in progress in the South. If this is so, it is surely an odd and confusing revolution, which is proceeding rapidly in several different directions at the same time.

Consider the record. The state of Alabama is now dominated by a liberal triumvirate, which includes at least two men of real stature. On either side of Alabama, in Georgia and Mississippi, the blackest sort of political reaction has taken hold.

In Georgia, to the applause of the North, the Negroes voted in really important numbers for the first time; and Eugene Talmadge, the most furious Negro-baiter in the country, will snap his red galluses in the state house next November. To confuse the issue still further, in Alabama, the liberal oasis, an amendment to the state constitution may well be passed.

It is frankly designed to disenfranchise the Negroes, and one distinguished Alabama jurist calls it the most reactionary provision ever proposed in any state.

This record of political contradictions could be extended indefinitely, and in many sectors. In Louisiana, the back of the corrupt Long-Maestri political machine appears permanently broken. Yet in Tennessee, the redoubtable boss E. H. Crump rides higher than ever.

In Kentucky, the Republicans are believed to have more strength than in many years. Yet Andrew J. May, surely one of the less decorative ornaments of the Democratic party, will probably be triumphantly re-electetd. In many parts of the South, the CIO is emerging as a political factor of importance. So is its bitterest enemy, the Ku Klux Klan.

Greatest Crisis.

If a political revolution is indeed in progress in the South, it is obviously a revolution whose end no wise man would care to predict.

But on one point most Southerners seem agreed; the South is in the midst of a political crisis of some sort, and it may last for a number of years. Professor Howard Odum of the University of North Carolina, perhaps the South's most brilliant student of the South, remarks on the "sudden revivification of the old sectional conflict, the recrudescence of the terms North and South."

"It would have been unbelievable, if it had not actually happened," he goes on to say, "that this, together with a special and intensified revival of the old race conflict, would bring the South to its greatest crisis and the nation again to one of its chief domestic dilemmas since the Civil war."

These are strong words, but Odum, an academic and scholarly man, is not given to wild exaggeration.

The most obvious immediate result of the crisis which Odum describes is that the political battle lines in the South have generally been drawn more clearly than ever before.

"A while back," one political observer in the Deep South remarked to this reporter, "everybody was just a Democrat, so by and large a man was elected on the basis of personality, because he gave the voters a good run for their money. Now it's different. People still like a good show, but they also want to know what a man stands for. What is really happening more and more is that a pretty clear-cut party system is emerging within the framework of the old one-party set-up."

In most Southern states, one of three blocs is dominant within the Democratic party. Each is quite clearly defined and each offers a different response to the crisis in the South which Odum depicts.

Three Parties in Party.

First there are the traditionalists and conservatives, typified by such men as Senator Walter George, of Georgia, or Senator Harry Byrd, of Virginia.

But for the accident of birth below the Mason and Dixon Line, these men would have been right-wing Republicans. The righteous fury of Northern liberals against such "Republocrats" for "masquerading under the Democratic libel" has no real basis in logic.

Plainly there is much conservative strength in the largely rural South, and while it is still original sin to vote anything by the Democratic ticket, this strength will find expression under the Democratic label. The conservative response to the changes with which the South is faced is to sit tight, to move as little as possible in either direction.

Second there are the liberals. The word is used loosely, as usual, since on the racial issue the attitude of most liberal Southerners would appear downright fascism to many Northern idealists.

On the racial question they are cautious gradualists, but otherwise they welcome and tend to encourage the changes that are coming about in the South.

Finally there are the reactionaries, the Bilbos and Rankins and Talmadges, who would race backward as rapidly as possible. The response which they offer to the Southern crisis is violence and repression.

Because they make good copy, and much has been written about them, non-Southerners tend to think of them as typical Southern politicians, and vastly underestimate the strong and bitter opposition to everything they stand for throughout the South.

Alabama and Georgia are contiguous, and they are in many ways as similar as any two states in the Union. Yet they have this year made exactly opposite political responses. Each makes an interesting case study of the way the South might go, and, therefore, the politics and politicians of both states will be further examined in this space.

MAJOR STOCKS RALLY, SELLING PRESSURE DROPS

Brokers Attribute Pickup to Easing of Tension Over Yugoslav Situation.

NEW YORK — (AP) — Selling pressure relaxed in today's stock market and most leaders rallied moderately but without any real vigor.

Brokers suggested that the easing of the Yugoslav situation inspired the reinstatement of accounts here and there.

Dealings slowed appreciably after a fairly active opening.

American Telephone, the weak spot of Thursday, revived somewhat but was far from retrieving its loss. Ahead were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Goodrich U. S Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Douglas Aircraft (in further reflection of the $5 dividend and hopes for another payment), Allied Chemical, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Consolidated Edison, International Paper (on a newsprint price rise), Southern Pacific, Santa Fe and Pennsylvania Railroad.

Housing Plan Up To Senate

the state eligible to receive $2,692,575 in federal funds for hospital construction next year.

The hospital survey measure was one of four sent by the special session to the governor for his signature into law.

Although the senate passed an administration-requested bill to create a commission to study the state's tax system, the house let it die after approving a substitute.

The alternative measure would authorize the tax study by the state tax department for a report next Feb. 1, provided the senate acts on it favorably.

An administration-sought bill for a commission to study salary needs of state employes which passed the senate was placed on ice when the house quit without considering it.

Before adjourning, the house on a voice vote approved a resolution by Shaw requesting the governor to expand his call to include an investigation of the state liquor department which the house republican leader termed the "No. 1 disgrace of the Lausche administration."

County Gardens Escape Blight

Richland county appears to be free of the fungus blight that is reported to be threatening tomato crops in other parts of the state, a check of gardeners revealed today.

Loss running into thousands of dollars is expected to result from the blight that is prevalent in the Columbus area. T. H. King, extension plant pathologist at Ohio State university, said the disease had struck some of the state's largest tomato canning areas. It is expected to spread further, he added, if the weather remains cool and moist. The blight attacks both the leaves and fruit with the infected fruits having large brown-colored spots.

YUGOSLAV RELATIONS CONFUSED

Seven Americans Released But Fear Expressed Five Others Dead.

of State Byrnes, in Paris, said the Yugoslav affair was "a pending matter." He added that all official U. S. comment would come from Washington.

The U. S. ultimatum to Yugoslavia had demanded that all the fliers still alive be released on the threat that, unless they were freed, Yugoslavia would face an American request for prompt action by the UN.

The official message to Washington from Harold Shantz, charge d'affaires at Belgrade, said the Turkish flier still was in a hospital. It added:

"The Fourth army said they are doubtful whether any of the crew (of the plane shot down last Monday) parachuted out. They think the crew may have thrown overboard objects which peasants mistook for parachutes."

Avoid Showdown.

The AP from Washington said "diplomats saw in Tito's swift submission to the American ultimatum (in the release of the seven fliers) a sign that nations in the Soviet sphere of influence have decided against forcing—at least now—a major showdown which might shake, if not wreck, the machinery for preserving peace."

International News Service, in a story bylined by Corp. Robert L. Dahlgren, flight engineer of the C-47 forced down Aug. 9, reported that Yugoslav troops surrounded the plane as soon as it made its crash landing.

"All of them were armed to the teeth," Corp. Dahlgren said. "They had tommy-guns and everything."

He added that the fliers "were questioned continually about all sorts of things."

BAND CONCERT SATURDAY

SHELBY—Another in a series of band concerts will be held Saturday night at 7:45 at Central park. The concerts are being given by the American Legion band recently organized.

OPA Hit By Price Whirl

the agency would pour out a "flood" of pricing orders today in an effort to meet its deadline for price adjustments required by the so-called Wherry amendment of the new OPA law.

The amendment, authored by Sen. Wherry (R) Neb., provides that dealers receive the same percentage markup they got on March 31. By law, OPA is required to complete pricing actions necessary under the amendment before Sunday.

Price Administrator Porter has announced that the flour price increase will be seven cents per hundred pounds. He said the boost was necessary to "meet parity requirements" of the new price control law.

Bricks, soil pipe and plumbing fixtures are among the building materials slated to go up in price. OPA said the price increases were required by the Wherry amendment.

Newsprint Higher

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The ceiling price on newspaper is up $7 a ton today, and it may be boosted further soon, an OPA official told a reporter. This authorization became effective Aug. 8. Hence, the $7-a-ton price increase granted yesterday is allowable on all sales since that date.

ELECTED TO FAIR BOARD

MT. GILEAD—Lee Struble, of Chesterville, and Evelyan Bunker, of near Marengo, will serve on the junior fair board at the Ohio State fair which begins Saturday. Struble was chosen as a representative of the Boy Scouts of America and Miss Bunker represents Farmers Institute posters. Francis Dalrymple, Morrow county 4-H advisor, will serve as assistant superintendent in the sheep department at the fair.

PILES ARE NEVER "MILD"

DANGER IN NEGLECT

No one should ever think of piles (hemorrhoids) as a "mild" disorder.

Although they may seem a "mild" ailment, especially when not giving pain or inconvenience, piles are in fact tumor formations without tendency to heal themselves, instead, they are likely, if neglected, to keep increasing in size, involving more and more of the rectal area.

Even a so-called "mild" case may be expected to undermine one's health, by inviting predisposing to or aggravating other ailments, such as: indigestion, biliousness, stomach trouble, constipation, headaches, pain in the back and down the legs, secondary anemia with its run-down tired feeling and general nervous irritability.

Removal of piles is the only permanent relief — written guarantee. My method produces little or no discomfort, does not require the use of knife or drugs, and seldom is the patient required to lose any time from work or other duties.

City Prizes Its Majestic Shade Trees

Estimate Age of Some Elms at 200 Years

By PHILIP GREENE

Trees, more than a century old, standing majestically along streets and avenues, help make Mansfield's residential district one of the most beautiful in Ohio.

While the only Johnny Appleseed apple tree in the city apparently is the one located on the D. O. Meese property at 591 Woodland road, there are scores of huge maples, elms, poplars and oaks. Many of the hardwoods have attained a size that should make them among the largest in the state.

In front of the home of James H. White, 385 Altamont avenue, is an elm which, while not of record height, is more than 16 feet in circumference four feet above the ground.

Another lordly fellow is a red oak in the picnic area of South park, fully 110 feet high and with its lowest branches some 45 or 50 feet above the ground

100-Foot Spread.

While not so tall or as large around in the trunk, a tree that should have a claim on some sort of record is the beautifully-shaped elm that spreads for nearly 100 feet near the northwest corner of Fifth avenue and Ashland road.

City Park Superintendent Frank Burton estimates the ages of these prize trees as between 100 and 200 years. He believes they might be even older, the only "certain" way of computing their ages being to cut them down and count their "growth rings," one of which is added each year.

These trees, lending a touch of natural beauty to the streets and parks, also present a problem.

For the remainder of the season Burton will have a crew of three men touring the parks to trim out dead branches and removing fallen limbs and trunks

Disease Attacks Maple.

"Right now the maples seem to be suffering from some disease or insect. The blight hits the tops of the maples first, gradually working downward until the entire tree is dead. We've removed one in South park this spring and four more in Middle and North Lake parks must go soon," Burton said.

Mansfield's gorgeous elms, however, seem to have been relatively untouched by the disease which has practically wiped out most elms in some parts of Ohio.

County Agent George B. Ganyard reported that Columbus and other cities have very few elms left. He said Mansfield either has better climatic conditions or the disease simply has not spread this far north.

Liability 'Not Clear.'

The perennial problem of trees that confronts the city is the possibility of their causing damage should they fall either as the result of being struck by lightning or of natural causes

Mayor Roy W Vaughn said the city's old ordinance governing responsibility for trees in the space between sidewalks and streets is "not very clear."

"The ordinance was written in 1886 and we're studying possibilities of changing it I've asked Burton and Hebel (City Street Superintendent C. H. Hebel) and Adams (Ernest Adams, city electrician) to find out what kind of ordinances other cities have on the matter," Vaughn said.

Several times in years passed, city council has discussed the advisability of employing a full time tree surgeon to trim and care for trees along the city streets and in the parks. The matter of responsibility for having the work done must be solved before the position would be created, Vaughn indicated.

This monster elm is at Fifth avenue and Ashland road.

WORKERS TURN DOWN CIO AT ATOM PROJECT

Two Plants Vote For Control By AFL, Third Rejects Union Rule.

OAK RIDGE, Tenn —(AP)—The CIO suffered the most serious setback of its current southern membership drive today when rebuffed by voters of three operating companies at the Oak Ridge atom bomb project.

In a three-day National Labor Relations board poll conducted in this sprawling city created as a war-time emergency, the Congress of Industrial Organizations failed to win approval of workers in any of the three plants.

Two plants voted for the American Federation of Labor's Atomic Trades and Labor council, and workers at a third voted for no union at all.

However, runoff elections were necessitated and the CIO's atomic workers' organizing committee will be given another chance at two of the plants.

The NLRB listed the voting results as:

Monsanto Chemical company, 676 voters eligible: AFL, 289 votes; voters for no union, 176, and CIO, 121. Four votes were void.

(The runoff will be between the AFL union and the CIO, according to NLRB rulings which say, "the runoff will always be between the two unions involved, unless the non-union voters in a three or more choice vote, is the leader, or one union receives less than 20 per cent of the valid votes.)

Carbon & Carbide company, 4,500 eligible voters, AFL 1,612; CIO, 1,429, and no union, 1,373. Nineteen votes were void The runoff is between the AFL and the CIO.

Tennessee Eastman, 6,200 eligible voters, voters for no union, 2,579; AFL, 1,721; CIO, 1,531. There were 11 voided ballots. The runoff will be between those desiring no union and the AFL.

CIO spokesmen indicated today that they would launch a vigorous recoup campaign between now and the runoff in an effort to enlist the vote of those who voted against both unions in the primary at the Monsanto and Carbon & Carbide plants.

The balloting climaxed an intensive six-week drive in which representatives from both unions braved a snarl of army red tape to woo the vote of the Oak Ridge workers in the first union election ever held here.

FLOOD OF NEW BOOKS DUE AT CITY LIBRARY

'Four Graces,' 'Asylum Piece,' and 'Escape in Passion' Among Arrivals.

One of the better new novels, THE FOUR GRACES, by D. E. Stevenson, is among the books to be placed in circulation Saturday at the Mansfield Public library.

The book tells the story of the four motherless daughters of the unworldly Rev. Grace who still thought of his girls as children, although the youngest was 21, and the rectory as a place of peace.

Then came Aunt Rona, and life became anything but calm. Although the war is going on, it is mostly off-stage, and only its lighter side is seen here.

ESCAPE IN PASSION by Jules Ramains, the 13th volume of a series, concerns the fateful year, 1933. Here, Jellez, one of the principal characters, is seen in London, Nazi Berlin, Warsaw, and Budapest, pursuing his amorous adventures, and then, returning to Paris, where he falls seriously in love. Other characters are Jerphanion, who serves for a short time as foregn minister, and Haverkamp, the financier, whose interests are so widespread that their crash produces international complications, and many others, some introduced in other volumes, some opening up new interests.

ASYLUM PIECE, by Anna Kavan, is a group of 34 strange and sensitive stories which explore the shadowy borderland between sanity and insanity. Some are told subjectively, some objectively, but all reveal subtle insight and emotional power.

Other fiction:

THE SECRET, Runbeck; AND HIGH WATER, Stein; AND THE DARKNESS FALLS, Karloff.

ALL THE BEST IN CENTRAL AMERICA, by Sydney Clark, is a travel book packed with readable information. It tells you how to get to Central America, and what to see when you do. There is a background section that brings to life as real people the ancient Mayas, the exciting figures of the Spanish Conquest, and those of Colonial and modern times. The author has just returned from Central America, and his book is ideal for the armchair traveler, as well as first aid to the one who really means to visit these neighbors to the south.

HONG KONG HOLIDAY, by Emily Hahn, tells the important incidents of the author's life during the long months from the Japanese capture of Hong Kong until she returned home on the second voyage of the exchange ship Gripsholm. The book gives a vivid picture of the oppressed city and its life, among the rich, and among the poor, in hospitals, and in internment camps.

MAINE CHARM STRING, by Elinor Graham, is partly about a hobby—button collecting—but it is more the story of Maine and of Elinor Graham's love for her home there and for the people who are her neighbors. It abounds in lively anecdote and is full of beauty as Mrs. Graham describes the loveliness of the Maine coast and depicts the kindly and salty character of the people.

Other non-fiction includes:

WHILE TIME REMAINS, Stowe; ORACLE OF BROADWAY, Morosco; DICKENS, DALI AND OTHERS, Orwell; CANDLE-Making, Klemke; THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS AND NATIONAL MINORITIES, Azcarate y Florez; GREAT GLOBE ITSELF, Bullitt; DICTIONARY OF GEMS AND GEMOLOGY, Shiply; FEVER BARK TREE, Duran-Reynals; SERGEI PROKOFIEV, Nestyev; STATE BOARD QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS FOR NURSES; POLITICAL HANDBOOK OF THE WORLD.

Libraries don't have just one kind of book, but all kinds. They have books for different kinds of people as well as books for all the different things that one person likes. This week the Mansfield library has three new books that are very different.

Are you the kind of person who likes adventure and excitement and something happening on every page? If so, you'll like WILD WATERS, by Lewis Miner. It's a story of Mississippi river boats in the days before the Civil war when being a boatman meant being tough and quicker than the next fellow. There is a collision of two boats in midstream, a fight in a tavern, a smash up of a raft, a terrific storm and about six other kinds of excitement.

If you are the kind of person who likes to see people get what they want then SAMMY, by May Justus, is the book for you. Sammy wanted—oh! how he wanted—some new shoes. He could plant seeds but that didn't get him new shoes; he could tend a mule, but that didn't get him new shoes; he could play a banjo, but that didn't get him new shoes. He knew a song—and how do you suppose a song could get him new shoes? It did.

Maybe you're the kind of person who likes strange, fairy-like stories. If you are, try TRUE AND UNTRUE, by Sigrid Undset. Here is a group of 27 stories, all different and all good. Some are short, "Why the bear is stumpy-tailed" has only two pages. Some are long, "Big Bird Dan" takes 14 pages to tell. Animals talk, mountains appear and disappear and there's no telling what strange magical thing may happen on the next page.

If you are a still different person and like different books come to the library anyway. There is a book for you.

74-YEAR-OLD PASTOR STILL SLUGGING SIN

Chicago Minister Now Finds More Wickedness in World Than Ever Before.

CHICAGO — (U.P.) — Rev. Philip Yarrow, who has slugged away at all kinds of sin for more than 40 years, said today there's more wickedness than ever.

But Yarrow isn't giving up the fight for virtue.

Yarrow, 74, believes people are sinning even more today than in the roaring prohibition days of the '20s, when he crusaded against everything from bootlegging, brothels and corrupt politicians to hot music and massage parlors.

"The letdown in morals is the worst I've even seen," he said. "Sex crimes are worse than ever.

"Unless we make a sharp swing back to the old fashioned virtues of pure living and simple pleasures we're headed for a rotten decadence."

From his bed in an old folks' home in suburban La Grange, where he has been confined since his leg was amputated four years ago, Yarrow still is fighting sin.

Pans Police.

"City governments are getting rotten all over," he claimed. "We've fought for years to get policemen to enforce all the laws and stop overlooking a good share of them for bribes. Today the fight is tougher than ever."

Yarrow currently is engaged on a new attack against filthy literature. From his bed, he directs his anonymous agents of the Illinois Vigilance association to go out and "slap them down."

Lightly-clad pin-up girls, strip tease dancers and immoral books are exciting men into committing the "worst mess of sex crimes I've ever seen," he said. His investigators have seized hundreds of "sexy" books, he said, and turned them over to the FBI and postal authorities.

"The street-walker problem has improved," he said, "but the sex problem in taverns and dance halls is getting worse.

"There's hardly a tavern or night club any more that isn't worked by prostitutes."

Served Jail Term.

Yarrow and his Vigilance association, formed in 1922, have met setbacks in the campaigns against sin. Once he went to jail for three weeks in defiance of an order to pay $5,000 to a book seller he had had arrested for peddling a book called "A Night in a Moorish Harem."

Yarrow was explaining how he directed his battle against dirty books through a chief agent called X, when X telephoned him for advice.

"Of course we won't allow stuff like that," Yarrow snapped. "Keep under cover and crack 'em down."

He hung up.

"X says a number of Chicago department stores are filled with filthy books," he said.

"It's terrible."

Want Shirley To Shun Sip

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—The Woman's Christian Temperance Union today asked United Artists Studios to delete a scene from Shirley Temple's forthcoming picture, in which she allegedly sips her first screen cocktail.

Mrs. D. Leigh, Volvin, WCTU president, said columnists had "announced generally" that Shirley was going to down her first drink in "The Bachelor and the Bobby Soxer."

If the bachelor lures the bobby soxer into having that drink, he will be doing "a disservice to American youth," she said.

Shirley, in turn, might lure "unthinking 'teen agers" to do likewise, she added.

"Youngster generally x x x are certain to be caused to protest, 'if Shirley Temple drinks, why can't I'?" she said.

"Since 'The Lost Weekend,' the liquor industry has been attempting, especially, to glamorize drinking in the movies. It seems that United Artists tuned into their wishful thinking, to say the least.

"In the past, Miss Temple and her mother have opposed the use of alcoholic drinks, in her pictures. It would be unfortunate were this restriction lifted for merely one drink.

"Shirley's responsibility, as well as that of other screen stars, to set a good example for American youth is great.

"United Artists should delete the scene before the picture is distributed. If it is not cut out then thinking parents would be wise in keeping their children from seeing it."

Nylons Become Peace Victims

AMBRIDGE, Pa.—(U.P.)—Lt. David Bradford's pair of nylon stockings weathered 28 bombing missions over Germany, then met disaster in the home of ex-WAC Mary Ellen Orler.

Bradford carried the nylons during the war as a good-luck charm. He had decided that when he returned to the United States he would present the stockings to the first former WAC he met. Demonstrating their fine quality to Miss Orler, the lieutenant snagged the stockings with his ring.

FUND HITS JACKPOT

OLYMPIA, Wash. —(U.P.)— The problem of what to do with money seized from illegal slot machines was put up to Attorney General Smith Troy. "It should come to some good," he said, and ordered it deposited with the state treasurer for the school fund.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, FRIDAY, AUGUST 23, 1946

One observer comments: "Man's nearest approach to perfection is when he starts out to make a fool of himself."

The clothing budget of "a typical college girl" is placed at from $750 to $1,500—which indicates that higher education is becoming higher and higher.

A dealer in foreign foodstuffs contends that "imported nuts are essential to the prosperity of the United States"—but he is probably referring to the sort grown on trees.

Discontent Growing In England

TODAY all signs indicate that the British Labor government may not be re-elected, and may not even last out its full five-year term. So says B. C. Forbes, who is now in Europe investigating economic conditions.

He says it is generally admitted in England that it was the servicemen, both with their own votes and through their influence upon others, who defeated the Churchill government, and many people feel that economic recovery will be long-drawn-out, if not impossible, under the present regime. Much discontent is felt over widespread unemployment, lack of housing and the high income tax. This amounts to 50 per cent on all but the poorest wages, and goes against the grain with British working people. Many of them work only three or four days a week, to avoid the tax.

One cause of high government expense is the subsidy system, under which huge bonuses are paid to farmers. For example, 40 dollars an acre is paid to a farmer for raising potatoes. These subsidies result in low food prices, to which the government points with pride. But even the less thoughtful among the people are beginning to realize that this sort of thing goes around in a circle, and in the end the cost comes out of their pockets.

While business men and industrialists are trying to make the best of things, a good many of them seem to feel that conditions are likely to grow worse for two or three years, and that by the end of that time there may be a change in government.

Objection To Tree 'Butchery'

A READER has been noticing the extent to which some of Mansfield's beautiful shade trees have been sacrificed to "the march of progress," and also to the fact that many trees are "butchered" to prevent interference with overhead utility wires on residential streets.

Suggestion is that these wires, and their supporting poles, should be in alleys, instead of on streets. This observer has an idea that the men who cut out the tops of shade trees are concerned only in making room for the wires, without regard to the later appearance of the trees, and wonders if it might not be advisable that permission of property owners be required before trees are mutilated in this way.

It's an interesting idea and is presented for further discussion—as many of Mansfield's residential streets have long been noted for the beauty of their shade trees.

Hospitable South Boulevards

MANSFIELD'S nearest village—South Boulevards—had a pleasant community gathering Wednesday evening . . . one of the sort that gives emphasis to the sociability and friendliness of neighborly group activities in behalf of a common interest.

It was nice, too, that an invitation was extended to Mansfield residents to visit the scene of festivities in the only adjoining village, and many availed themselves of the hospitality.

A fund is being built up to buy equipment for a village community center and it may be hoped that South Boulevards residents will provide some sort of annual gathering that will become as "traditional" in that community as has the Johns park watermelon festival.

Increase In Female Alcoholics

WHILE it appears that the popular Kinsey Players, now in their annual Mansfield engagement, are not producing one of their old-time favorites, "Ten Nights In a Barroom," this time—unless they change their minds—there may be a reason.

Possibly that tear-jerking song of the drunkard's little daughter may have to be revised to fit more recent developments. You remember, it goes, "Father, dear father, come home with me now," etc., but a more modern version might make the appeal to "Mother," rather than to "Father."

In any event the September issue of Woman's Home Companion has an article by Dr. Robert V. Seliger, titled "Are Women Drinking Too Much?", in which he tells of the startling increase of women alcoholics within the past few years.

His earlier experience had been that not more than one out of ten alcoholics who came to him for treatment were women—now the women are four in ten, he says.

"They range in age from 18 to 70," he reveals. "Some wear mink coats and diamonds; some are obviously poor. Most of them you might meet anywhere in America—housewives, mothers and professional women, teachers, nurses and business girls—but each has the same tragedy—all are ill and their illness has the same symptom—alcoholism."

It's an illuminating article—and gives an idea of why the nationally and locally active organization, AA (Alcoholics Anonymous) is gaining attention from women as well as men.

Blunders are Longest Remembered

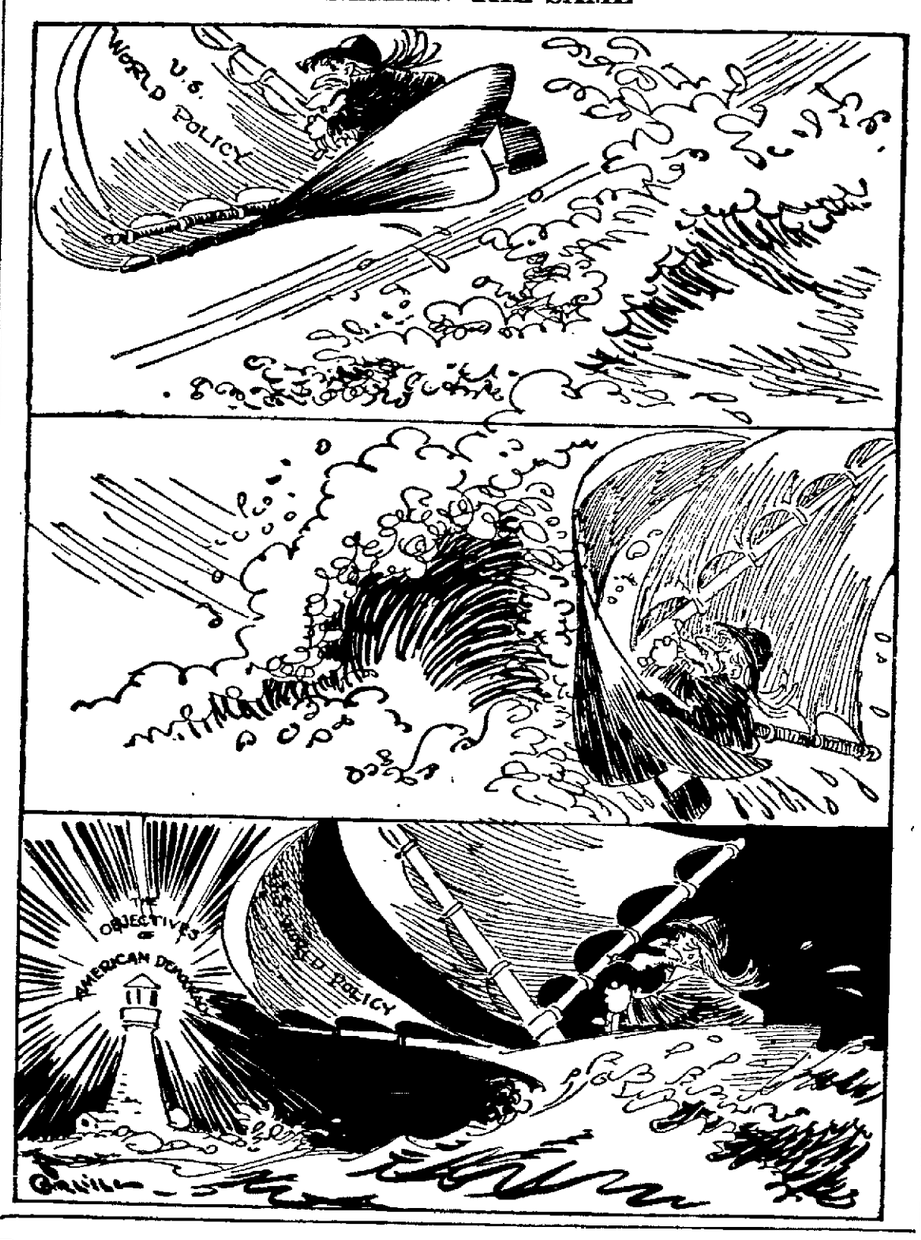
IT IS HARD to be successful in almost everything and then be remembered chiefly for one failure. That was true of the late Tony Lazzeri. For 12 years he played with the New York Yankees with such hitters as Ruth, Gehrig and DiMaggio, and was feared almost as much as these sluggers. Yet his best remembered game is that in the 1926 world's series when Grover Alexander struck him out at a crucial point in the crucial game.

The drama of the situation is probably the reason. That accounted for the fame of Fred Merkle, hero of many a baseball battle in the early part of the century, who is remembered not for his successes, but for his failure to touch second base in the deciding game of the pennant race. This is not fair, but it happens outside of baseball, too.

By the way, has there been any spread of the "no tipping" idea recently adopted by the Pere Marquette railroad?

Not so far from right, after all, was the child's error in defining "mirage" as "a place in which to keep the car."

THE POSITION MAY CHANGE BUT THE COURSE MUST REMAIN THE SAME



Downey's Fantastic Financial Ideas

By RAYMOND MOLEY

LOS ANGELES—This column pointed out, a few days ago, that deaths and defeats have removed all ranking Democrats on the senate banking and currency committee between Chairman Wagner and Senator Sheridan Downey, with the exception of Majority Leader Barkley.

Since Barkley is probably unable to serve as chairman, this puts Downey squarely in line. And only the aging Senator Wagner stands between the banking system of this country and some of the most fantastic financial ideas ever known.

It is now in order to present some of the evidence of the Downey views. In 1936 Downey appeared as the author of a small book called "Why I Believe in the Townsend Plan." The introduction was written by Dr. F. E. Townsend himself. Dr. Townsend wrote that Downey "is an economist and tax authority, and, what is more important, a human being."

An examination of the book clearly leaves the impression that Downey was indeed a human being, whatever doubt might arise about economics and taxes.

He was human enough to see that the way to power in the California atmosphere of that year was through the advocacy of the Townsend delusion, then sweeping the horse-shoe courts and park benches like a sandstorm.

His political judgment was justified, two years later, when he defeated Senator McAdoo, in whose behalf President Roosevelt made impassioned appeals in person. Thus, Townsend's support in those years was more potent than Roosevelt's.

It is not necessary here to argue about Downey's views. It is sufficient merely to state them and to permit the reader to draw his own conclusions.

The features of the Townsend Plan, to which Downey says he is committed, are: That all persons over 60 shall receive pensions of $200 a month from the United States government.

These are euphoniously called "social dividends." They must be spent, not saved. The $20 billions to be set aside for social dividends should be raised by some form of taxation, although Downey does not commit himself to the Townsend transaction tax. He says that the $20 billion would be yielded by a general employment and would be the margin of national income over the boom year of 1929. Savings are, according to Downey, the economic curse of America. They caused the 1929 panic and other calamities.

Downey flatly states that "potential industrial expansion is now so limited we can never hope to find in it a sufficient outlet for the evergrowing savings of the nation." There is little demonstration of this amazing statement, but Downey goes on to specify the lines in which there is no need for further investment of savings.

This part of the Downey economics deserves to be stated in his own words. He writes: "Our steam and electric railroads are all built. We shall never build any more except for an occasional mile. A limited amount of capital could and doubtless some day will be spent to modernize them, but not now."

He says, further, that "our gas and electric utilities cannot absorb any new capital. This field is dominated by existing companies whose present facilities are operating at less than 50 per cent capacity and are amply able to supply the wants of the nation for an indefinite period."

As to general manufacturing lines, he says, "The United States has a great number and variety of factories and processing plants. These are capable of supplying many human wants to the point of saturation. Most of them are operating at less than 50 per cent capacity." Thus he concludes, there is little need for further savings and investment.

In this book Senator Downey not only expressed approval of the views of Dr. Townsend, but of some of those of Father Coughlin.

He said, "It is the contention of Father Coughlin that the monetary changes we have been considering could most rapidly, efficiently and permanently be secured by the national ownership of the Federal Reserve Banks. I wholly agree with this." Later, he says that all public bonds should be bought by the federal reserve banks and thus eliminate all interest charges on public debts.

This ladies and gentlemen, is a sample of what the prospective chairman of the senate banking and currency committee advocated in 1936. The reason why the holder of these views stands so close to great power over the finances of the nation is the seniority system in congress.

Unless something is done about that system, a great many strange things are going to be in store for us before long.

Four-Point Program Presented To Head Off War With Russia

By DREW PEARSON

(Editor's Note—This is the last of Drew Pearson's columns on the tense relations between the USA and the USSR and what can be done to prevent war.)

WASHINGTON—I suspect a lot of people are getting bored at my continued writing about our tangled foreign relations and the fact that the Paris peace conference is doing so little to unravel them.

However, the unmistakable impression of the observer at Paris is that though the Russian people don't want war and though the last thing the American people want is war, both are slowly edging in that direction—despite themselves. So perhaps it is better to face these facts now than regret them later.

One of the few men bold enough to face the facts is Dr. Harold Urey, famed atom scientist, who recently pointed out that the alternative to international control of the atomic bomb is an early war by which the United States would secure control of the world; or a later war which would end civilization.

This column has suggested a less drastic program for heading off war which can be summarized as follows:

Program for Peace.

1. The USA to avoid being the tail on the British foreign office kite, co-operating 100 per cent with the United Nations instead, and building it up to a position of genuine world strength.

2. No appeasement of Russia. Make it clear that the first aggressive step taken by the Kremlin will be the last.

Now that the United Nations has been organized, there is no reason why the Russians should not submit their dispute with Turkey to the UN.

That's what we fought this war for—to set up a world organization for peace—and the Russians should be reminded of the fact. So should the British.

3. International control of the atom. The United States has taken an important step toward atom control by offering to share our knowledge—provided the atom is governed by majority vote, not the veto. The Russians so far have refused.

4. Cultivate the friendship of the Russian people—regardless of their government.

Discourages Friendship.

Of this four-point program, the most important of all is friendship. Friendship is the chief reason there never will be a war between the British and American people. We know each other so well that we can understand each other's faults. Our common language is one of the biggest aids to this understanding.

But because there is no common language between ourselves and the Russians, we have to work harder at friendship. So far the United States has done little; the Russians far less.

So far the state department has proposed news and cultural programs for Russia on a limited scale, has even made a small start in this direction. But it has had to work in the face of a reluctant congress. Even with Secretary of State Byrnes in Paris, Senator Tom Connally, chairman of the foreign relations committee and supposed to be an enlightened statesman, failed to press passage during the closing days of the last congress of the state department's program for exchanging students and promoting cultural relations.

Russia Bans Friendship.

The greatest obstacle to American-Russian friendship, however, is the Soviet government itself. There was a time when this was not the case. When Maxim Litvinov was foreign minister and later ambassador in Washington, the Soviet permitted foreigners inside Russia, while the Soviet embassy staff in Washington mingled freely with Americans. Ex-Ambassador Troyanovsky, for instance, was a great bridge-playing friend of Jesse Jones, Mrs. William E. Borah, and various other capital bigwigs.

Today Troyanovsky is relegated to a minor clerkship in Moscow while Litvinov is out of favor. A new Kremlin policy is in vogue—a policy of permitting no social intercourse between the Russian people and the western world.

If Russian officers in Germany or Austria become too friendly with American officers, suddenly they are warned by the NKVD (secret police) to keep to themselves.

In Moscow the American embassy has begged the Soviet government to permit the extensive circulation of the state department's propaganda magazine, "Amerika," a picture book printed in Russian which is tremendously popular and has proved an eye-opener to the Russian people. However, the Kremlin permits only 50,000 copies monthly to be seen by Russians.

Meanwhile, Moscow conducts a skillful propaganda campaign not only in Russia but in Czechoslovakia and other satellite countries aimed at stirring up suspicion against the western world. According to the Moscow radio, the United States had no part in the war against Japan, won Alaska from Russia by an American trick, and lynchings and riots are staged in the USA almost every day.

This anti-American propaganda may have behind it a sense of insecurity on the part of the little group of men inside the Kremlin. But whatever its motive it is not the act of a friendly nation.

Thus our showdown with the Soviet might start at exactly this point: Are we or are we not going to be friends? If so, let's begin working at it. Let's begin by exchanging several thousand Russian and American students, by permitting the entry of books and magazines, scientists and newspapermen. Let's begin to be friends.

That question—as to whether Russia really wants friendship—ought to be asked soon, and in no uncertain terms, by the highest officials of the American government.

Furthermore, at first we should not take no for an answer. We should be just as persistent in peace as in war.

If in the end it becomes clear that Russia does not want friendship, then it will be time to examine Professor Urey's suggestion that we may have to unloose the atomic bomb as an advance preventative.

Russia Adopts "War of Nerves" Technique.

WASHINGTON—Sensation-makers who talk of war with Russia in a few months or even a few weeks are responding in precisely the way the Soviets hope we will respond. The goal of the present all-out radio attack on the United States is to create as much confusion and uncertainty as possible.

Underlying this war of nerves are certain facts which should never be lost sight of. First of all, Russia is not now prepared for war and does not want war.

Therefore, if war comes, it will come on our initiative and, in the light of all our past history and tradition, that seems hardly conceivable.

Soviet policy-makers know this very well. That is why they go as far as they do. The parallel with Nazi Germany's war of nerves that went on all through the '30s is very close. The Nazi propaganda attacks were calculated to divide and confuse, just as are the Russian attacks.

The Soviet union has the added advantage of being able to count on such carefully planted troublemakers as Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia. Tito was schooled in Moscow. He has an advanced degree in Soviet power politics and he is today applying his education with skill and daring.

Those who have made the study of Soviet policy a business during the past decade believe the danger of armed conflict in the immediate future is negligible. While they concede that prophecy where the USSR is concerned is always hazardous, they believe the present bluster is almost entirely for propaganda purposes.

They predict a course for the immediate future somewhat as follows. After more and perhaps even noisier bluster over the Dardenelles and other trouble spots, Russia will make what will appear to be important concessions. This will have a pronounced effect on world opinion. It will tend to lull present suspicions.

But those who take a gloomy view for the longer future are convinced that, behind the front of a willingness to reach reasonable compromise, Russian preparations for war will go on unabated. The members of the politburo, in this view, believe an armed contest with the capitalist-democratic west is inevitable. They know, however, that time is necessary to prepare for it—to reconstruct Soviet industry and to obtain the advanced weapons which the west has and which Russia lacks.

Those who look beyond the uproar of the moment talk in terms of an uneasy, propaganda-riddled peace of five years. Russia would then have had a chance to complete the five year plan outlined in Stalin's political speech of last winter.

It would be then that the west could expect, not angry recrimination and bluster, but action intended to eliminate once and for all the threat of western rivalry and possible western attack.

Certainly the Soviets are going to try to get everything they can in this period, short of war. They will skirt very close to the line. But they will not do this because they deliberately want and seek war.

If war comes out of this dangerous bargaining, it will be still another of those catastrophic accidents which seem to rule our destiny.

Farmer's Diary: "Then and Now."

AMONG the rugged hills of south-central Pennsylvania, the Dutch farmers hauled their crop of wheat, oats and rye, into their large barns. With the grain heaped to the very comb, secure against sudden showers or a season of wet weather, they changed the rigging on their heavy lynchpin wagons, coupled the wheelbase shorter, to fit the set of manure boards stacked away from the year before. Generally each farmer possessed two such wagons, and if his farm were very large, he had three.

From September until August his manure pile grew. From the horse and cow stables it was loaded on a large wheelbarrow and hauled out, once or twice a week. The herd of young cattle browsed about the stack and found shelter there in winter, and as the straw-stack decreased and melted literally away, the refuse of all the stables took its place.

The young cattle and the milk herd during milder winter days tramped the straw mixed with liquids through the heap until by spring a spongy mass five to six feet high and perhaps 30 feet in diameter was formed. The rains of March, April and May soaked it thoroughly. When pasture grew, it was left alone to ripen.

The young boys of the family pitched it on a wagon and built it high above the side boards. The father hauled the load out to the field, while a second wagon was in process of being loaded. Generally it was the field of oats stubble not yet plowed for wheat that was covered with small piles of manure pulled off the load with a long-handled hook. Long rows of heaps, 20 feet apart—these to be spread over the ground evenly before the plowing started.

At home my older brothers took delight in attempting to build a load heavy enough to stall the team, because father had told them it couldn't happen. But one August was extremely wet and in a hollow the load sank to the hubs. Even after the load was thrown off, it tested the team thoroughly to pull the empty wagon free.

Times have changed. Then horses were the only power, save for the steam thresher and the steam railroad engine. Lime was burned regularly in kilns built on the farms, and hauled in unslaked piles upon the fields. Manured heavily, each field in rotation plowed down clover sod for corn.

Going back, after fifty years, to visit those same fields I find them yielding less. Only where livestock for milk or meat products is raised, have farms gained in tilth and fertility. The lime kilns are relics now. Piles of finely ground limestone dot many autumn fields—tractors replace teams and the work is done in one-third the time. Electricity lights and powers the tools of home and barn.

Yet the change is not all to the good. Modern tools are still too new, perhaps. There is an instinctive yearning to keep the best of the old ways, and couple them with the ease and the speed of the new power. Machinery cannot make a farmer—it can only help him.

Your In Danger, Girls.

Turtle-shooting is a sport unknown to us, and should perhaps be a misdemeanor in its own right; but the incident of the fatal shooting of a Logansport, Ind., woman by a hunter who mistook her hat for a turtle suggests that in self-defense the fair sex may eventually have to go back to wearing hats that look like hats. At the moment they look like anything but.

The resultant confusion has given us hilarious accounts of the absent-minded lady who carried her hat as a handbag while wearing her purse on her head, and of the miniature millinery which has been variously eaten by mistake at cocktail parties, used by misguided males as pot-holders, and so forth.

The Logansport story suggests that the hazard can be graver than we supposed.—Detroit News.

So You Can't Go to Sleep, You Say.

THE harder you try to go to sleep, the more wide awake you become.

To those who find themselves irritable and depressed from habitual lack of sleep this may seem cold comfort, but if they are to solve their problem, they must drift into this happy state.

Any effort, even the effort to go to sleep, induces wakefulness. So don't make the effort and, above all, don't worry about not sleeping.

Hinder Not Help.

It won't help; it will hinder, and furthermore, it constitutes needless fuss in view of the fact that only a few hours of sound sleep nightly are required for health.

Instead of going to bed to prod yourself to sleep, take a brisk walk before bedtime. A warm bath, a warm, non-stimulating drink, and a dull book are also helpful. To be avoided are excessive smoking and large evening meals.

According to Drs. Laurence Hughes and S. E. Jones of Australia, there are two kinds of natural sleep. One they call physiologic and the other psychologic. In Physiologic sleep, the sleep is sound and there are no dreams.

The amount of physiologic sleep needed is small, and varies according to the age and the type of work a person does. Psychologic sleep, they find, is regulated by custom and habit. Both types of sleep are deficient only in rare cases.

Most of the ordinary complaints accompanying sleeplessness, such as irritability, inability to concentrate and depression come from a lack of psychologic sleep. If a persons awakens from sleep suddenly, it may be due to some condition such as heart disease or ulcers.

Such things as bright lights, loud noises, and worry may delay sound sleep or cause awakening from light sleep.

If sleeplessness is really present, it requires a careful study by the physician to determine the various causes which may be present, but in most cases simple regulation of habits suffices to overcome the difficulty.

URGES HIGHER MINIMUM WAGE

Schwellenbach Says Checkup Shows Many Firms Violate Law.

COLUMBUS —(INS)— Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach said today that despite current high wage schedules, eleven per cent of the firms inspected by the labor department violated the minimum wage law.

Schwellenbach, speaking at the national convention of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, pleaded for a higher minimum wage, pointing out that a full year at the present floor of 40 cents an hour brought only $825 at 40 hours a week.

Referring to minimum wage violations, the secretary said:

"During the past fiscal year, in spite of the comparatively high wage levels that prevailed, inspectors for the wages and hour public contracts divisions found minimum wage violations in eleven per cent of the 40,000 establishments they visited."

He also said that despite demobilization of the armed forces and discontinuation of war jobs, there were only two and one half million unemployed, as compared with 56.7 million employed. He added:

"The department of labor does not take all of the credit for this truly remarkable achievement, but we had a hand in it—a large hand, I think."

Father Flanagan of Boys' Town also was a scheduled speaker for today's sessions of the 48th annual Eagles convention.

Finds 'Nobody Home' Signs All Over Washington, D. C.

By FREDERICK C. OTHMAN

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Washington the post-war capital of the world? Haw-haw-haw.

Not today, it isn't. The statesmen are doing their stuff somewhere else. The president is sniffing the azalea bushels in Bermuda, the congressmen are kissing babies at home, the supreme court has gone fishing, and there barely are enough cabinet members in town to start a small poker game.

There's nobody in the White House except some cops and clerks. The secretary of state is in Paris, battling at the peace conference. Secretary of Treasury John Snyder is thinking of taking off tonight to join Mr. Truman where the flying fishes play.

The secretary of war is in Massachusetts making a speech. The secretary of the navy just returned from an extended trip. Secretary of Commerce Henry Wallace is taking his ease on his New York state chicken farm.

Attorney General Tom Clark is in Germany.

Cap Krug, the secretary of interior, got in, all tired out, from Seattle. Secretary of Labor Lewis Schwellenbach leaves today for Columbus, O. Secretary of Agriculture Clint Anderson is packing up for a month at his ranch in New Mexico.

Nobody's going to worry him there about the price of meat. He hasn't even got a telephone.

The postmaster general, when last checked, still was in town, but fidgety. Many of the foreign ambassadors, led by Great Britain's Lord Inverchapel, have scrammed. Inverchapel, accompanied by his bag-pipe player, has gone to Blowing Rock, N. C. And why not?

There's nobody here for him to do business with. Even the top-string lobbyists have beat it, leaving cocktail lounges to their underlings. Only senators on the job you know about; they're the ones who are being interviewed these days on all subjects. At least one of these gentlemen stayed here during the dog days for this special purpose; it was his chance to get his picture in the papers.

Many of the government's second layer big-wigs are in far places and there's nobody much left, but clerks. Mostly they're sitting at their desks, looking glum. About 185,000 jobs must be lopped off the federal payroll before October 1 by congressional edict. Although the veterans bureau is about to hire about 100,000 extra helpers, many a small time government hireling is wondering how he'll make out as a haberdashery clerk.

Only place where business is booming in Washington is OPA, which is recruiting M-men (meat investigators), figuring out new prices on hundreds of items, and cleaning out the files on such products as bobby-pins, dried octopus meat, and sleigh bells. I'm staying away from there. Makes me tired, just watching the activity.

Bedtime Stories

—By Thornton W. Burgess

WERE THEY TO BLAME?

Blame too often is misplaced;
Justice in a way disgraced.
—Old Mother Nature.

Over in Farmer Brown's garden Flip the Terrier had stopped barking. There was no fun in barking at one who didn't seem to care. Old Mr. Toad didn't seem to care. He refused to be frightened by that barking or by the threatening little rushes Flip made at him. He knew, did Old Mr. Toad, that Flip was just bluffing. He knew that Flip wouldn't touch him. He had learned a lesson when he had first made Old Mr. Toad's acquaintance, a lesson he had not forgotten and wouldn't forget. He had picked Old Mr. Toad up in his mouth, started to bite him, then wished that he hadn't. He dropped Old Mr. Toad and never since had he tried to pick him up. Never had he had anything more unpleasant in his mouth. You see in his skin Old Mr. Toad has a most unpleasant liquid to use at such a time.

His fun having worn out, as that sort of fun usually does, Flip had left the garden and gone back home to take a nap on the doorstep beside Bowser the Hound. Over in the Green Meadows near the garden fence were two small folks who felt very big because they were out in the Great World with no one to tell them not to do anything they wanted to do. They were Chucky, one of Johnny Chuck's grandchildren, and Little Wobblenose, one of Peter Rabbit's grandchildren. They had been frightened by Flip's barking, for it was the first time they ever had heard such a noise. They never had seen a Dog. Just then they didn't want to. What they did want to do was to run, but, not knowing which way to run, they just squatted right where they were in the grass, the wisest thing they could have done.

"I don't smell sweet clover," said the little Rabbit.

After a long time, which really was a very short time, they began to move toward that garden. Time is measured by size of those waiting. To small folks a short time may be, and often is, a long time. They moved slowly, after a few steps or hops, stopping to look, listen and smell. Doing so, they felt very big, grown-up as becomes people on their own out in the Great World. So they came to the fence between the garden and the Green Meadows. They crept under it and stopped on the very edge of the garden. There they sat for a really long time.

This was a strange place, a very strange place. It was full of green things growing, strange plants they never had seen before. And there was not a single green thing they did know. There was no grass. There was no sweet clover. You see Farmer Brown's boy took good care of that garden; grass and weeds had no chance to even get started there.

Presently some of Mother West Wind's children, the Merry Little Breezes, came dancing along and saw the two round-eyed, little adventurers. Straight over to them danced the Merry Little Breezes, and each one brought the scent of a different kind of plant with which they tickled their noses.

Little Wobblenose sniffed and his nose began to twitch and finally to wobble. Chucky sniffed and sniffed and his nose began to twitch.

"I don't smell sweet clover," said the little Rabbit.

"I smell something even better," said the little Woodchuck.

"I wonder if what we smell is as good to eat as it smells," said Wobblenose.

"There's a way to find out," said Chucky.

"Let's do it," said Little Wobblenose, and hopped right into the garden.

What a wonderful place they had found! They hadn't dreamed that there could be such a place in all the Great World. Here were wonderful things to eat, the best things ever, and enough of them to feed all the Rabbits and Chucks in the Great World, or so it seemed to them. So they wandered about between the rows of plants, nibbling a leaf here, taking a bite out of a leaf there. They were sampling, trying to decide what they liked best.

All boys and girls like candy. Of course. They would be queer if they didn't. But some like one kind best and some another. It was so now with the little Rabbit and the small Chuck. So presently they separated. Little Wobblenose began to eat a prize of lettuce. Chuck started in at one end of a row of young bean plants to see how many he could eat. They were in mischief, but they didn't know it. Were they to blame? These good things were mere plants growing out of the ground, and just like the grass and the clover they were free to take all they wanted of.

New York Notes

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

(Dorothy Kilgallen is on vacation. Her guest columnist today is Jim Bishop, well-known magazine writer and author of the novel, "The Glass Crutch.")

The men—about five or six dozen of them—came into the upstairs room in twos and threes—a little bit correct at first, shaking hands and smiling and glancing briefly at the long table against the wall. On the table was a giant pink ham studded with cloves and a king-sized turkey with something looking like a green firecracker sticking out of its neck and bowls of celery and olives and platters of tongue and imported cheeses and groups of tiny brown squab and layer cakes so huge that the weight of the top layer squeezed the creamy chocolate filling out through the middle.

The dark sleek man who cocked his head when he listened was the guest of honor. He listened and laughed and slapped his right knee and was fast in catching the point of a gag and fast in telling one. He is Mark Hellinger, an independent producer from Universal, and these men of Broadway and Hollywood and the fields of journalism were gathered to do him honor for having completed a picture called "The Killers."

Pete Martin, a young face with gray hair, shook hands with Mr. Hellinger and gravely suggested that the picture ought to open in Chicago and, as a publicity stunt, have the ushers shoot the standees. George Frazier, who is doing a profile on Hellinger for a magazine, came into the upstairs room at Toots Shor's with a 59 cent cannon strapped to his belt and he took it out and went "bang-bang . . . drrt drrt" at the guests. He had a bodyguard with him who wore a dollar and fifty-nine cent gun and he went around protecting Frazier.

Sid Silvers sang from a chair and Bert Wheeler, universally beloved, had everybody laughing before he began his drunken mouse story. By A. M. the men settled down to serious drinking and Toots got up and made a solemn speech about him and Mark in the old days. It had a lot of lump-in-throat and Toots didn't want to sound like a sissy so he scattered some naughty oral confetti through it and when he finished, Mark ran up and wrestled him around.

At 3 o'clock, Al Horwitz, Universal's press agent, looked as bored as only a sober man can. George Frazier said he was tired and he went out bowing nighty-nighty and he went downstairs and bought a beer and came up again looking like someone who forgot to bring his ulcer pills. The old colored man in the rest room began to get bigger tips and he told everybody that he was 77 and that he worked in Shanley's and Rector's and everywhere, but that there was no finer gentleman in the whole world than Mr. Shor. If he expected some stew to carry it back to Toots, he was right.

It was almost 5 o'clock now and the few men who were left sat at two tables and cut up old touches and remembered the time that this happened and that happened to the Dolly Sisters, it was Russell Birdwell. A few more rose to go and someone looked at a watch and said "I'll get killed."

Everybody said what a helluva swell party it had been and there was more handshaking and the waiters stood in a little knot at the back of the room and watched big Toots and Mark walk out with their arms around each other. The room was empty and the yellow lights stared down at dirty tablecloths and an overturned chair and bits of food and a beaten piano, no longer covered by the hummingbird hands of Eddy Duchin.

Washington Letter

—By Jane Eads

WASHINGTON—A lot of young people who got around the world a bit during or just after the war have developed an acute case of wanderlust.

"I never want to settle down again—not even when I get decrepit."

So says pretty Emily Towe, who was a newspaper woman in New York and Washington until she joined the Red Cross last year.

Emily has itching feet all right. She joined the Red Cross in a public relations job and was sent to India in September, 1945. In November she flew over the hump to Shanghai.

Then she got all over north China, flying around in Army and Marine planes till the middle of March.

IN PEIPING she went shopping with a couple of Marines. She was looking for a pair of earrings. She found the pair she wanted in a tiny little shop in the courtyard of an old palace. The shopkeeper served tea—free.

He said the earrings, which were hand made, were worth $6. The Marines said that was too much. The shopkeeper, accustomed to bargaining, came down to $4. The Marines told the wizened old man he was the Jesse James of China. Of course, he had never heard of Jesse James, but he had an idea that he must be a big shot in America.

"Jlesse Jlames—me Ah Jlesse Jlames." He grinned with pride. "You can have the earrings for $3."

The Marines and Emily walked toward the door.

"All right, $2," he said. Emily was wearing the baubles when I had lunch with her the other day.

Later she went to South China, to Canton and Hong Kong. Stopping off in Tokyo and Honolulu, Emily came home only to traipse off again. This time it was to Alaska. Emily had resigned from the Red Cross and was doing free-lance writing.

She says women are streaking up to Alaska on the theory that prospective husbands grow on trees. There are still more men than women there, she says, but they're mostly rugged characters and not too willing to pop the question.

A lot of gals seeking matrimony end up waitresses, teachers and clerks and life is just about as it is back home, only more so. In Nome, for example, life's most exciting moments seem to be when the boat steams in from the states with supplies.

She says Nome is bleak and grim, boasting only one street with wooden sidewalks. Even in late May, she says, ice is piled up in front yards and a half mile out on the Bering Sea. Eskimos come to town in their wolf parkas. Nome is a metropolis to them.

* * *

THE town is built on tundra, or very soft soil. If you get off the sidewalk you sink into it up to your knees. Each year when the snow melts the wooden houses buckle up. So do the sidewalks. All this gives a lopsided appearance to the town.

Emily said she never saw darkness the whole time she was in Alaska. If she came in from a date at 11.30 or 12 o'clock, it seemed broad daylight.

Now she is off again—this time on a freighter for South America. She hasn't figured out where she'll go after that.

Finds Army Life Has Good Points

CLEVELAND — (UP) — A technical sergeant at the Army recruiting station here believes that life in khaki has its points.

The sergeant recently received a check for $10,000, the pay-off from a government endowment policy which dates back to World War I. The sergeant, who has been in the Army 31 years, also is planning to retire soon on an income of $256.70 monthly. The amount of his pension was increased by his service as an officer during 1917-18. His name? He doesn't want it used because "I don't want to be bothered by salesmen."

DISEASE HITS CATTLE

CAPETOWN —(UP)— Farmers of western cape are fighting to overcome a spreading new cattle disease "lumpy sickness." Drenching of cattle with DDT every two weeks has been ordered by the government. Symptoms are lumps the size of tennis balls in the skin. They are not fatal but ruin the condition of the cattle.

Barclay On Bridge

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

USE RADICAL MEASURES

Doctors use the term "radical measures" to describe the most aggressive possible tactics in their combat against human ailments. Usually it means surgery. They do not resort to such procedure except when it is clear to them that milder treatment is none too likely to accomplish the cure. It should be the same with a bridge player. If he sees a situation in which one factor is a great threat, his job is to concentrate upon giving it the works instead of using wishy-washy methods.

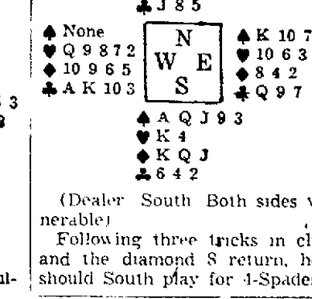
By approximately the same bidding, most declarers in a big duplicate reached the No Trump game contract. Two of them made it, thanks to bad defense. following the spade 2 lead to the A. At one of those tables, East, a relative beginner, returned the spade suit to the K. South then led the clubs until East took the A on the third trick. The defense got two more spades, but South then won the returned heart, led to the diamond A and then ran enough clubs for game.

At the second table, East had heard about knocking out of dummy the side entry for a long suit. So, after winning the lead with the spade A, he returned a diamond. But which diamond? The 8-spot. South got this with his diamond K return. As a consequence, the A got forced out of dummy before operations began on the clubs—the one factor on which the contract depended. So South in that case was able to score only seven tricks, two each in clubs, hearts and diamonds and one in spades—so was down two.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer South. Both sides vulnerable.)

Following three tricks in clubs and the diamond 8 return, how, should South play for 4-Spades?"

Q, leaving the dummy's A intact, so he, too, was able to bring in enough clubs for game. That East had used mild medicine where radical surgery was demanded.

At the third table, the spade A trick was followed by the dia-

HOROSCOPE

For Saturday, August 24.

Judging by the planetary auguries, this might just as well be considered a holiday for the weekend, since little could be accomplished except by the most concentrated and solidified efforts, perseverance, indomitable will and sound wisdom.

An inflationary tendency is in the air and might lead to extravagance, excess, poor judgment and worse indulgences, not only with funds but with physical energies and in social or emotional festivities. In all, keep the ground under foot.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves with a static or crystallized set of circumstances to encounter, with little basis in assets, resources, funds and projects to build upon for any enduring progress or advancement.

However, a carefree and expansive inner urge is not the way out, since there is an inflationary lure beckoning to extravagances, excesses, indulgences, with all manner of squandering of substance, in business, social and emotional expenditures. Some definite gain might respond to reason and acumen.

A child born on this day may have an inclination to extravagance, indulgence and expansive ideas, which would demand most painstaking efforts to maintain a balance or to keep solid ground under foot.

Vatican's Coins Bear Peace Dove

VATICAN CITY — (UP) — The Holy See has announced that it will issue a new series of coins, in gold and silver.

Three thousand coins will be issued in three series, one for 1943, 1944 and 1945, years during which, due to the war, the Vatican failed to issue its annual coins.

The new coins, which will be minted in the Vatican itself, will bear Pope Pius XII's coat-of-arms, a peace dove carrying an olive branch in its beak.

In 1917, the Indian Paintbrush was designated as the state flower of Wyoming.

STATE FAIR TO DRAW SCORES FROM COUNTY

Young and Old Await Opening of First Big Exposition in 5 Years Tomorrow.

Scores of Richland countians, including several 4-H club members who will demonstrate and exhibit projects, today were awaiting the opening of the 92nd Ohio State fair which will get under way tomorrow and continue through next Friday.

The grounds officially open for the first fair since August, 1941, at 5 a. m. Saturday.

There will be nightly shows in front of the grandstand and other features in the evenings to entertain fair-goers who can't get to the grounds during the day. A Sunday program has been scheduled. Horse racing will start Monday.

Crowded into the various halls and barns are 20 per cent more prize-winning exhibits than ever before in history. Preening and fussing about them are hopefuls who eye the $120,000 in awards and prizes.

In the horse barns on the north side of the re-graded race track are sterling trotters who will compete for the Governor's cup, the Director's cup and the other featured events of the five-day racing program.

The $1,000-Director of Agriculture stake and the Buckeye pacing stake, worth $2,000, will be run Wednesday afternoon. The Governor's stake will be trotted Thursday.

One new attraction will be the music hall where the best of Buckeye musical talent will entertain. That is one of the free attractions.

Another new program will be the interdenominational religious services in the coliseum Sunday. All other fairgrounds activity will cease during the worship hour.

Saturday, opening day, will be "4-H and Future Farmers of America day." Junior fair livestock will be judged and the junior fair exhibits opened in the morning.

The all-Ohio boys' band will play a concert in front of the grandstand preceding each afternoon's races.

In other spotlights of the multi-ringed circus will be spinning demonstrations and style shows for the ladies; judging of farm produce in the horticulture and agriculture building; the modeling of a butter cow in the dairy products building and various movies.

VETS PITCH IN TO AID HOUSING

College Students Work as Laborers on New Quarters at Ashland.

ASHLAND — Instead of standing around moaning over the fact that temporary housing for veterans probably could not be completed by fall for lack of labor, Ashland college vets have signed up as laborers and are rushing the new quarters to completion for the opening of the fall term.

Assigned as construction crewmen, the veterans, many of whom are slated to live in the houses themselves, form 65 per cent of the laborers on the job.

When completed, the housing will give quarters to 18 families and 32 single veterans. The units are being brought here by truck and reassembled to army specifications on King road directly opposite the college campus.

Because of government ruling, no building in the project may be occupied until the entire project is completed including installation of stoves, furnishings, etc.

Because it is physically impossible to complet the units by Sept. 4, the opening of school, prospective occupants who have families have been asked to leave their wives at home and secure temporary housing until the units are ready.

Raise $25,000 Chapel Fund

ASHLAND—A new chapel for Ashland college became a near reality today as the Brethren Women's Missionary society, convening here in connection with the national Brethren conference, announced a total of $25,000 in the missionary society's fund for construction of the chapel.

Largest contribution during the year to the chapel fund came from the First Brethren church at Johnstown, Pa., $700.

NLRB APPROVES BUCYRUS UNION

Independent Organization at Crawford Steel Foundry Recognized.

BUCYRUS — The independent union at Crawford Steel foundry was today given official recognition by the Labor Relations board when the Washington office ordered an election in the plant for the employes to determine whether they wish to be represented by the independent union or the United Steelworkers, (CIO).

Date of the election has not been set but must be held within 30 days of a date to be set by the Cleveland NLRB office.

The independent union was organized early this year following a strike of steel workers during which the plant was closed. The plant resumed operations when workers made a secret entrance to the shop by a rear entrance before daylight, outwitting pickets stationed at a front entrance.

Gil Dodd's Sister, Marilyn, Shows She Can Run, Too

ASHLAND — Rev. Gil Dodds, who rose to national fame as a runner before he donned ministerial garb, isn't the only sprinter in the Dodds family.

Dodds' sister, Marilyn of Smithville, won the 50-yard dash for girls over 13 and placed second in the sack race during the informal track meet conducted by Dodds during the Brethren conference program this week. Miss Dodds also participated in winning group races during the event.

Ashland's Rev. L. V. King, pastor of the First Brethren church here, also proved that Dodds isn't the only preacher who can run fast. The Ashland minister won the sprint for ministers 36 years old and over.

Thirty children attending the conference with their families participated in the competitions with Phil Lersch and William Batton of Ashland tying for high points. Events, all directed by Dodds, included standing broad jump, baseball throw, sack races, ministers' races, and shuttle and open relay.

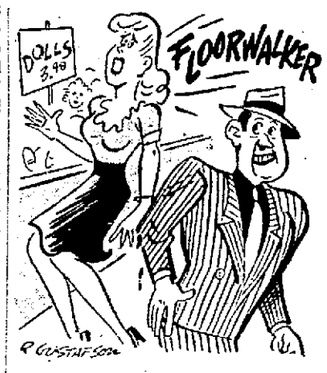
Try and Stop Me

—By Bennet Cerf



That male shopper who was bounced out of the toy department just didn't know where to stop his experiments. He squeezed one doll until it hollered "Mama." Then he squeezed another one and she yelled "Floorwalker!"

President Truman likes to reminisce every now and then about his brief experience in the haberdashery business. He remembers one very tough customer who was in the market for some shirts. Mr. Truman pulled out his most expensive line and said, "These wear like iron. They just laugh at the laundry."

"Yes, I know," said the customer, unimpressed. "I have some just like these. They came back with their sides split."

...OR THE SCHOOL'S FAVORITE TEACHER...OF 1964!

Did you ever watch a group of school-boys, and try to predict their futures? It isn't easy! So much depends on the opportunity that's allowed them; the education and training. But education takes TIME... a real sacrifice for many families. And it takes MONEY... that most of us today find hard to save.

That's one of the reasons why hundreds of thousands of American families (for three generations) have chosen to buy their children's-needs from Montgomery Ward. They've learned that at Wards... year in, year out... they get good quality, wide assortments, and PRICES THAT SAVE THEM PLENTY!

Next time, before you buy your youngster's clothes at that expensive specialty shop, COMPARE AT WARDS! Come in... and check the savings for yourself. (You'll frequently find identical merchandise, from the same manufacturers, sold by Wards for less.)

Before you leave, picture your total Ward-savings... over a 10 or 15-year span... invested in your child's own future. It's an investment your child will thank you for, in years to come!

Jack Lait — On Broadway

THE QUESTION is often raised, where men discuss such things, whether great ring-performers are really fighters. Many, of course, are not. They begin sparring with gloves on and become skillful under the conditions found within a roped ring, with a referee to enforce defined rules, with so many minutes to spar and so many to rest.

Therefore, the will to battle is not always the underlying motive which in the first instance discloses their aptitudes. Most boys box in gymnasiums and youth clubs; some have congenital coordination, speed, endurance and wind, and thus excel others not so gifted physically. But the day when ring-fighters came up from gutter-brawlers has long passed. James J. Corbett ended the era officially. He told me, himself, that he never had a fist-fight in his whole life, and only once was angry in a ring—at Charley Mitchell.

Jack Dempsey broke in after padded ring-made champs had become the fashion. As a hobo, he had engaged in fierce, primitive combat against tough, desperate, dirty men, and whipped all who raised their hands to him. He took his tigerish proclivities with him when he became a professional, and, until he had passed his peak and was outboxed by the academic Gene Tunney,—a synthetic star made by athletic instructors, he was invincible.

* * *

The late Otto Floto, who was long my dear friend, told me a classic about Jack.

The young fellow from Manassa had recently turned fighter for money. Otto was his manager. They barnstormed and picked up what they could where they could.

Otto had an old-fashioned touring car in which they traveled from date to date. They sometimes fought a half-dozen matches in a week.

After a contest in a Colorado town, Floto and Jack were driving on to Grand Junction, to spend the night. Along about midnight, on a narrow curve on a mountain road, a car pulled up, crowded theirs to a stop against the wall. Six men jumped out, one with a gun. It was a stickup.

In a briefcase, Otto had some $600, Jack's share for the fight that night. He surrendered it to the bandits, who drove off, still holding the gun through the rear window until they were out of sight.

It was a tough touch, but what could they do?

Otto drove on. They arrived in Grand Junction, a mining town, all closed up, except one all-night lunch-room, which was lighted and in action. They had a few bucks in their pockets and decided they'd have a sandwich before retiring.

As they came to the door, Jack saw something. He waved Otto, who was crippled, having had a leg amputated, back.

At a table, inside, sat the six robbers.

Jack stalked in. The bandits saw him coming. All leaped to their feet. Dempsey swung six times—left, right; left, right; left, right—and six men lay on the floor, unconscious.

The briefcase had been discarded. Jack went through their pockets and got all the stolen money. He also got the one gun they had. He stood over them and, as each one came to, Dempsey pitched him out into the road.

He stood in the doorway, inviting the six of them to come back, all at once. He did not hold the gun But the six ran and vanished into the night. See what I mean?

Pegler — Fair Enough

NEW YORK—Perhaps you will remember that, last winter, when some of our statesmen in Washington were accusing one another of resorting to double-talk, I took amiable exception to their error and maintained that double-talk is a much more subtle and artistic confusion than the mere use of such words as "implementation," "activate" and "social impact" and traced it first to Hollywood and then to Boston.

My research paused there with a strong suggestion that double-talk was of Irish origin, once known in Boston as "swerve" but I now venture a step further, thanks, in part, to Paul Hayes, of New York, who wrote to say that James Joyce, bad cess to him, whatever that means, had used this medium in "Finnegan's Wake," which is something I never read.

"For example," Mr. Hayes wrote, "how's this:

" 'While that mooksius with preprocession duplicitly and diplussidly, was promulgating ipsofacts and sadcontras, this raskally gripos, he had allbust seceded in monophysicking his illsobordunates. But, asawfulas he had caught his base semenoyous sarchnaktiers to conbuccinate upon the silipses of his aspillouts and the acheporeoozers of haggyown pneumax to synerethetise with the broadchestiviousness of his sweetovular ducose—' "

Well, I said to mesclf, not how's this but what the devil is this?

"This is from 'the mookse and the gripes,' " Mr. Hayes wrote. "The quotation is a fair example of the entire book."

Mr. Hayes further alleged that Dr. Douglas Hyde, who recently retired from the presidency of Eire, a celebrated folklorist and linguist, many years ago issued a small book, called, he thought, "Shelta," in which he set down what he succeeded in collecting from Irish tinkers.

"Members of those still Nomadic tribes are in New York," Mr. Hayes said, "and if you can find them and get an entree you may be on the trail of something interesting in word usage, though it turns out in the end to be but the remains of a lost language."

So, thankin' his worship, Mr. Hayes, I tried Shaun Nunan, the consul general of Eire, but he had nothing to offer, although he thought to doubt that Doctor Hyde had dignified such shenanigans with his scholarly attention and then I telephoned James MacDermott, I did, and him the president and editor of the Gaelic-American, and asked him could he tell me now?

Mr. MacDermott's opinion of Joyce is well on the sober side of adulation but on the subject of Irish tinkers he made out that they had been a sort of tribe of wanderers, like gypsies, who may have evolved a sort of Irish geechee for their own fun, sport and amusement, as the fellow says, and how do we know but for privacy or secrecy also in communication between and among one another?

Some of them came to the United States, too, he said, and wandered about the south but they seem to be vanished now, for who ever hears of a tinker today, though as late as my own childhood, which wasn't yesterday, we did have tinkers in Minnesota and they were wanderers, too, mending pots and pans and umbrellas. Irish, or not, or what, I cannot remember, but tinkers we had, that I know, and they came and went and we never knew them.

If there be true double-talk shouldn't we just shovel it back into the rare book department and content ourselves to spemin the posnet over a pfujschute of bonded beelmite and a snack of grontlaub on rye with a few friendly south Boston fight managers and a couple of old cops?

Thus, anyhow, I know, that it isn't double talk that Senator Joe Guffey, of Pennsylvania, uses in his great orations, nor Browder nor Stalin, too, but something else, though I wouldn't say what. And if this is the true mother tongue, then the corruptions and dilutions of south Boston and the lucid clarity of Danny Kaye have been an evolution toward reason and we don't have to ask why the tribe of tinkers vanished from the earth. They couldn't take it and I make bold enough to doubt that they could dish it, either.

Hal Boyle — Globe-Jotting

(For Hal Boyle)

MUNICH — (AP) — Adolf Hitler stood in the big, cold-looking reception room of his chalet at Obersalzburg. There were tears in his eyes and an entreaty in his voice.

"If you can save my dog," he said, "you can have anything you want."

Dr. Alphone Dopfer, toprank Munich veterinarian and known throughout Germany for his skill with dogs, said he would try. The ailing dog got well. But the fuehrer never paid the bill.

Dopfer told the story at his office, now reduced to a tiny apartment in a bomb-wrecked building only 150 yards from the wreck of Hitler's brown house, scene of his 1923 putsch.

Now 53, Dopfer, a tall, strong man, with piercing eyes and clipped mustache, would just as soon forget the 6,000 marks he says Hitler owed him. In the first place, he says, it was forced labor, and his experience at the dictator's chalet and later at army headquarters on the Russian front dismayed his dog lover's soul.

The doctor was working with an office full of squirming dogs, he said, one day in March, 1943, when he got a telephone call from one of the fuehrer's staff. In a short while SS men came for him in a big blue Mercedes and whisked him off to Obersalzburg.

There he was told that the fuehrer's Great Dane, "Blondie," was ill, but that the doctor couldn't see the dog until Hitler awakened from his midday nap. In time, he was ushered into the presence, he said, and Hitler put on his weeping act.

"He must have thought I didn't believe he loved his dog, I guess," Dopfer said. "He told me that his dog was more important to him because he was 'so lonely.' He said I could have anything in the third reich if I would cure the dog."

Dopfer examined the Dane, found a trace of pneumonia, but after five days he concluded that what really was wrong was the fuehrer's own vegetarian diet.

Danes need meat, the veterinarian told the fuehrer, who grudgingly consented to include it in Blondie's diet.

Blondie, eating meat, got over her ailment and the summer rolled around. In November, Hitler put in a hurried call to Dopfer from the Russian front. Blondie had a skin disease this time. A special plane flew the doctor to Hitler's headquarters. Hitler was all entreaty again.

This time Dopfer brought the dog to Munich for three months to make certain of a cure. Hitler called personally a few times, always opening his phone conversation with "Here, Hitler. How is my dog doing?"

When his work was done, Hitler's staff told Dopfer to submit a bill. He thought his double success was worth 6,000 marks, but in deference to the fuehrer he said he would leave his fee to Hitler's judgment. Dopfer never heard another word from the grateful fuehrer. Nor was he ever paid for his work with Eva Braun's three Scotties.

Dopfer has retired from doing business with fuehrers and their lady friends. He says there's no future in it.

Said Judge Will: "A landlord has a right to come back to a house he owns. But he has no right to slap his tenants around."

"I know there are a great many landlords who might want to do just that, but we can't let it be open season on tenants," the judge declared.

In addition to the $25 fine, Pandurovich was given a 30-day suspended county jail sentence on condition of his good behavior. Pandurovich pleaded guilty to the assault and battery charge.

Traffic Growing At New Port, Harrington Tells Kiwanians

Speaking before Mansfield Kiwanians during their weekly luncheon meeting in the Mansfield-Leland hotel yesterday, James R. Harrington, manager of Mansfield's municipal airport, said that its $2,000,000 facilities were already being used by civilian and military pilots.

Harrington told the group that the field was averaging between 15 and 20 flights daily from all over the country, and that interest in personal aviation was rapidly expanding.

He revealed that his air service had $1,126,000 worth of orders for new personal planes, and had just this week sold two $70,900 ships to corporations for executives' use.

He predicted a big program ahead for personal planes as well as for the commercial type at the Mansfield port.

Stressing the extreme safety of air travel as compared with motoring, he said that while traffic was a problem at the present time "In five years we'll have a 'blind' approach and landing system to handle the traffic program."

He declared that the "blind" landing and approach system virtually eliminated crack-ups, adding that most air collisions were between planes whose pilots were judging their landing or passing by visual rather than radio means.

Asked when Mansfield would get a terminal building, Harrington said that until we know what the requirements for users of the port will be, only a temporary structure should be built.

"A quonset hut in which ticket sales and baggage could be handled, would do the job until we know what is actually needed," he declared. He said that with one possible exception there isn't a terminal in the country which is adequate . . . that all of them have been outgrown and outdated. He added that terminals should be built to expand along with increasing air service.

Harrington was introduced to Kiwanians by program Chairman Atty. Charles H. Huston.

Guests at yesterday's Kiwanis meeting included T. J. Campbell, George Dimmer and James House, all with Kenneth A. McIntyre associates of Cleveland; Hugh Horton and Owen Carlton of the Central National Bank of Cleveland; S. G. Marlin of Cleveland, Kiwanian M. D. Haag of Elyria, and Robert Richards and R. E. Sneeringer of Mansfield.

2 INJURED IN AREA MISHAPS

Mansfielder Hit By Truck, Girl Hurt at Willard; Train Smashes Car.

A Mansfield man and an Arizona girl, visiting in Willard, were injured last night in traffic accidents while a Columbus man escaped injury when his car was demolished by a train at the Bowman street crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad.

Carl Hammond, 57, of 190 Park avenue west, suffered a broken right leg and laceration of the left elbow and hip when he was struck by a truck driven by Howard Crawford, 332 Fifth avenue, about 9:15 p. m. yesterday at South park and Diamond streets. Crawford told police Hammond stepped in front of the truck.

Joyce Lee, 13, of Tucson, Ariz., suffered a fractured leg and punctured abdomen when the bicycle she was riding collided with a car driven by W. R. Howard, of Willard, in Willard last night at 8:30.

She was taken to the Willard Municipal hospital. Granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Russell, 815 Park avenue, she is visiting them for the summer. Howard said he was turning with the traffic light at the corner when the accident occurred.

The westbound Trailblazer, fast Pennsylvania train demolished an auto early this morning at the Bowman street extension during a heavy fog, but the driver escaped unharmed.

Kenneth R. Moore, Columbus salesman, registered at the DeSoto hotel, told state highway patrolmen that he was headed toward Mansfield in the fog when he got off the road and found his car stuck on the railroad tracks. After trying to get the car off the tracks he abandoned it in the nick of time when he saw a train approaching. Later the car was found dragged a quarter-mile down the tracks, a total wreck.

Mrs. Penney Stricken At 61

Mrs. Jessie M. Taylor Penney, 61, wife of Earl L. Penney, 319 Sheridan avenue, died at the Mansfield General hospital Thursday afternoon following an illness of more than a year.

Born in Crestline, Aug. 9, 1885, the daughter of Charles M. and Ida Boals Taylor, she had lived in this community most of her life. She was a member of the First Christian church and the auxiliary of Fireman's local.

Surviving besides her husband, are two sons, Charles O., and Donald J.; one daughter, Mrs. Robert E. Weltmer; and three grandchildren, all of Mansfield; three brothers, Frank Taylor of Springfield, Mass.; Floyd of Mansfield; and C. H., of Peoria, Ill., and five sisters, Mrs. O. B. Grandon, Mrs. Harry Ballet, Mrs. Roy Casto and Mrs. Howard Wentz, all of Mansfield; and Mrs. H. G. Watts of Washington D. C.; and her father, Charles M. Taylor of Mansfield.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Finefrock funeral home Saturday at 1:30 p. m., by Rev. A. E. Lindbeck, pastor of the Mayflower Congregational church. Burial will be in Mansfield cemetery. Friends may call at the funeral home.

TOO MUCH HEAT—

Charles N. Blackman, realtor, of 119 Arthur avenue, can vouch for the fact that it gets hot in the summer around Bakersfield, Calif. And so do autos! On a recent motor trip west Blackman reports that the thermometer climbed to a blistering 117 degrees at that California city. But that wasn't all. As he arrived there his 1941 model car was running hot. "Real hot," he said. So he had it "repaired." Cost $84. Then, 37 miles out of Bakersfield, it started running "real hot" again. It had to be towed back to Bakersfield for another repair job. This time the trouble was righted and he was able to drive the car back to Mansfield.

COUNTING HYDRANTS—

Mansfield is taking a fire hydrant census. Fire Chief L. J. Steele said that there's never been an accurate record kept of the number of hydrants the city has, or an adequate system set up for locating broken ones. The hydrant census will do both, he says. All hydrants have been painted and are now being numbered. Once numbered they'll be charted as to their location. "Then all we'll have to do is refer to the number when we send out a crew to repair a broken one," Steele said. When the census is complete the city will also know just how short it is on hydrants, he said.

Chatter . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hascher enjoying the first lap of a two-week motor trip through Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia . . .

AGENCY TELLS MAYOR FEDERAL MONEY'S READY

But City Will Have to Build Its Own Hangars and Maintain Project.

Mansfield may get financial aid from the government for the construction of an administration building at its new airport, but the city will apparently have to pay the entire cost of any new hangars that are built.

This information was contained in a letter received today by Mayor Roy W. Vaughn from Lane W. Wilcox, superintendent of the Civil Aeronautics Authority's airport branch.

Vaughn had asked Wilcox whether the city could procure government aid in the construction of an administration building, hangars and for maintenance work at the port.

The CAA official's letter stated that the Federal Airport act does not allow for aid in the construction of hangars, but, "providing the port meets other requirements of the act," and requirements to be set up by the CAA, money is available for construction of administration buildings and "other construction."

"No funds will be available for maintenance work," his letter stated.

Plans Meeting.

The mayor said that he plans to confer—"possibly next week"—with CAA officials at Columbus to determine how the city can apply for aid in administration building construction.

In his letter Wilcox also confirmed the fact that letting of a contract for the installation of a lighting system at the new port has been temporarily "frozen" along with other government contracts.

This was reported last week in the News-Journal following a telephone interview with a CAA official at Chicago. Contract-letting has been postponed until Oct. 1 while the government reviews various proposed projects.

Concerning the lighting-installation, however, Wilcox stated that "we understand steps are being taken to clear this project through Washington."

A Chicago CAA official told the N-J that he felt certain lighting installation would get under way shortly after Oct. 1 and possibly before.

MRS. WIRTH, 99, DIES AT GALION

One of City's Oldest Residents Came to U. S. From Germany as Young Woman.

GALION—Mrs. Caroline Wirth, 99, one of Galion's oldest residents, died Thursday at 4 p. m. at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ida Linsenman, 247 Sherman street.

Born in Welzheim, Wurtemburg, Germany, Mrs. Wirth came to the United States in 1869. Her husband, John Wirth, whom she married after coming to this country, died in 1925.

She was a member and secretary of the Frauenverein of the Peace Lutheran church, of which she was the oldest living member, for 50 consecutive years. She also was an honorary member of the Women's Missionary society.

On her 99th birthday in June, Mrs. Wirth received callers at her daughter's home. Although she was bedfast, she had a smile for all her visitors. She read the daily newspapers regularly, and enjoyed conversing in German and reading a German language Bible.

Mrs. Wirth had been bedfast for the past four and a half years. She had been at the home of her daughter for the last nine years.

She is survived by her daughter, four grandchildren, eight great-grandchildren, and three great-great-grandchildren. A daughter and foster son preceded her in death.

Rev. Philip E. Auer will conduct funeral services Saturday at Peace Lutheran church. Burial will be in Fairview cemetery. Friends may call at the Volk funeral home.

LOAN ASKED

Volunteers Request $4,000 to Enlarge Building.

The Volunteers of America today filed a petition in common pleas court to borrow $5,000 to improve and enlarge their building at 290 North Main street.

The concrete-block addition, already being constructed, would provide working space for Volunteers engaged in binding paper and repairing furniture collected from homes in the area.

Repayment of the loan, secured by a mortgage on the property, would be made from the furniture and paper sales, Adj. R. L. Gutterman, explained. The petition said repayment, plus 4 per cent interest, would be at a rate of $50 or more a month.

Gutterman said work is expected to be completed by Oct. 1.
